Starred in physics, starred in genetics
In keeping with Instauration’s policy of anonymity, most communicians will be identified by the first three digits of their zip code.

When I was in college, there was a group of really annoying evangobels who would hold Christian get-togethers. If you were dumb enough to get suckered into one, you’d be subjected to their strong-arm, in-your-face conversion efforts. One day, when they were going around knocking on doors, trying to get people to go to a “Christian Barbecue,” I replied to my nosy visitors, “I thought they stopped barbecuing Christians a long time ago.” They tried to argue, but I shut the door. They then remained outside my room shouting whether I knew what the verb “to believe” meant. I told them I believe that Christianity hadn’t been my cuppa for a long time.

I was a paratrooper in WWII (Africa, Sicily, and Italy), was missing in action twice and hospitalized three times. I know the mentality of Marines, paratroopers, and combat infantrymen. Their job is killing people, and they are very good at it. These warriors despise what gay soldiers enjoy doing for sexual satisfaction. Perhaps “despise” is the wrong verb. A better one may be “loathe.” The best soldiers hate the gays as badly or worse than they hate the enemy.

The depths to which Holocaustians will sink was illustrated in a story about Leni Riefenstahl in Time magazine (Oct. 18, 1993). The head of the film department of “a leading U.S. cultural institution” was quoted as saying, “If he met Leni Riefenstahl, he would cut her nipples off.”

The Christmas holidays, with their terrifying commercial intensity, with Chosenite cash registers jingling merrily and heaving under the weight of shekels, crooners chanting end-of-the-year sentiments, all “conservative” views. Let some healthful interest in the planet and for humanity as a whole. I’m an “eco-Ioony” and an ex-leftist.

Americans have deified psychologists, laboring under the delusion that they are real scientists. Don’t let the shrinks or social workers get aloof of your kids, or you’re a goner. How the hell do we protect our families and people from this sort of social disease? I’m starting to understand the end-of-the-rope desperation of some old-time Safety Valvers.

Enough complaining! We who know the score have to buckle down and work for solutions to our problems. By constantly dwelling on the racial horrors, we are falling into Judeo-Christian End Time thinking. (It’s hopeless! We’re all going to die! The best we can expect is to get raped out of this antiwhite nation to some heaven like Switzerland!) We can accomplish great victories here in North America if we are willing to act. Let me offer one sure fire action, guaranteed to succeed. Make a list of all the young white mothers of small children you know within your extended family/social group. Then find out the birthdays of the children and the mothers. Next send cards and flowers and make phone calls on these joyous days and stir up a fuss over the mothers. Finally, bring together in a social setting some of these mothers and their children with unmarried young white women, those with PC feminist opinions or even those with kno-tha of all “conservative” views. Let some healthy interaction occur between the children and the unmarrieds before making subtle or not so subtle comments to the childless women to the effect that they are failures. Women are very good at this type of very useful hazing. With constant reinforcement and the use of some skilled matchmakers, you are sure to bring into the world many white children and boost the morale of their mothers.

The Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington is a monument to Jewish power. It exemplifies the strong historical Jewish tendency to exaggerate beyond reason. But its very existence makes it impossible to deny that the death of Jews matters enormously more in America than the deaths of any other group. Why isn’t there a museum for the Ukrainians who were unquestioningly killed in larger numbers than the Jews—and often by Jewish Communists? Why isn’t there a museum for the Chinese exterminated during the Communist takeover and the Cultural Revolution? That death toll was even greater. The answer can only be that one Jewish death is worth more than the deaths of several non-Jews, that only Jewish deaths matter enough to justify a museum.
in the brains of the strutting, heavily armed, comical dictators of the “emerging nations.”

☐ The most valuable thing Instauration has done for me is to tip me to the whole school of scientists who are now in the establishment doghouse—people like Galton, Lombroso, Houston Keith, Cohn, Sheldon, Barker, Darling ton, Eyensick and Cattell. Libraries have done an amazingly thorough job of making sure no one gets to even lay eyes on the great books of these geniuses. The censorship is so thorough that it tends to prove the existence of an equillitarian conspiracy. But I’ve managed to locate some of these banished classics through Howard Allen, Noonitide Press and used bookstores. Instauration and the literature it has advertised have taken me beyond a world that can only exist on paper or in media special effects land to the vital, harsh, real world with its attendant horrors and beauty, the world where science and genuine spirituality meet, and where history is ever being born.

☐ I cannot understand why those who are “few-wise,” to use Arnold Leese’s term, as well as those who are aware of the profound significance of race, are almost invariably far to the right politically. To me these issues have nothing to do with the traditional differences between right and left. If there is one nation that stands in relation to other nations, our own in particular, as the parasitical ivy stands to the great oak tree, to use Hitler’s analogy, why should liberals not be concerned? Don’t liberals want a country that is ruled by “We the People”? More to the point, don’t they want to avoid being devoured? One of the primary tenets of Rousseau was that society does not create the impulse that gives rise to human betterment; rather, this is born in the individual. The first duty of society is to take care not to thwart the natural development of this innate impulse. Like a gardener, society is not the maker of the seed or its potential. Like a gardener, its role is merely to cultivate the conditions that are optimal for the seed’s natural development. Well, if racial differences are profound, if race determines the mind, the personality and the morality that Nature wants to develop, if we are to have a society that complies with Rousseau’s principle, then obviously racial integration is a very bad idea. One would think that liberals, who are traditionally keen on Rousseau, would be extremely open-minded regarding the race question. I can only conclude that there must be something wrong with liberals. They are not behaving as liberals ought. Nothing could be more unnatural than that they have allowed the far right to enjoy a monopoly regarding the most earnest questions about race and world Jewry.

☐ Anent “Genius Sperm Bank” (Dec. 1993), I don’t think any young marrieds would be interested in using such a high-tech germinal repository. I’m sure they’d prefer a “do it yourself” operation. Their problem is to make the most of the genes they have, which are usually more than adequate. There is another way to accomplish the goal. Very few women in this country are fed the optimum during pregnancy. As a result, the infant does not develop all of its potential.

☐ Shallow conservatives like Rush Limbaugh would probably find the idea of saving the Nordic gene pool as silly as they find the idea of saving ancient forests, wildlife or neolithic tribes.

☐ With all the uproar over “insensitive” nicknames for athletic teams, the most flagrant violation of all has gone unnoticed. In Washington, the murder capital of the U.S., what could be more insensitive than to have a basketball team called the Bulls?

☐ Your December cover was right on! Christmas is yielding to Hanukkah. I checked the local school district’s Calendar of Events and discovered that Christmas vacation is now Winter vacation; Easter vacation now Spring vacation. Altogether I found 11 references to Jewish holidays, but not one mention of a Christian holiday. It makes my blood boil. And I’m not even a practicing Christian anymore!

☐ When a mud madman cuts down a group of white commuters, the media elite see it as a golden opportunity to disarm—whites! Don’t our betters realize no gun control law would’ve prevented that crime? Indeed, had one of the white victims been armed, most might still be alive. The Long Island Railroad is just another chapter in the long, sad history of white masochism, like the American blonde who gave her life to South African blacks.

Scanner Ahoy!

After an appeal to our literati to send us their effusions on 3½” disks, we not only got a batch of some, but we also bought a scanner. So, though we prefer computer disks, which we will return, we can now handle clean, typewritten material by scanning it into our word processor. This doesn’t mean that short pieces and Safety Valve letters, either handwritten or packed out on an ancient typewriter, are unwelcome. We still prefer disks for long or medium long articles, though our new scanner is almost as effective in lessening the pain in the overworked fingers of our typists! But whatever you send us—disks, typewritten or handwritten, screwed, clay tablets—please keep them coming. They are Instauration’s lifeline.

☐ You have several penetrating and perceptive writers. Judson Hammond I greatly admire. Forrest and Stinger rivet me. Of course, sometimes the material is harrowing in its stark shark truth. The piece by Ivan Hild (Nov. 1993) about the poor young woman so unpectedly murdered at Washington’s Dupont Circle invaded my psyche for days. Having lived in Washington for ten years, I watched numerous acts of black violence and had been a victim a handful of times. Once I was lucky not to have been killed. DC and the federal government have irrevocably gone down the drain. Now that I’ve managed to get out of that rattrap, I’ll never return. I still have white friends stuck in the Congoid-infested jungle and pray they don’t end up being murdered. I couldn’t shake the imagery and impact of Hild’s piece.

☐ Do not spoil the many admirable features of Instauration by indulging the biases we inherited from the Enlightenment. Had it not been for the intrepid persistence of the Church and the heroic monks during the early Middle Ages, we would have no texts from ancient Greece and the Hellenistic period to discuss. Christendom has and had its weaknesses because it is composed of men, not divine beings.

☐ Few people in history have had the fame and fortune of filmmaker Steven Spielberg, but he isn’t happy! When he was a boy someone called out that he was a “jew” and no one leaped to his defense. Some people called me “fatty,” but I didn’t tear out all my hair.

☐ Once there was something called miscegenation, but that has evolved from a crime to an obligation. The next barrier under attack is the prohibition of homosexual marriage. Why shouldn’t Tom marry Pete? Come to think of... it, why shouldn’t Tom and Pete also marry Phil? Is two some sort of magic number? And if it’s okay for Tom, Pete and Phil to marry, adopt kids, form a family as good—hell better—than any old-fashioned Ozzie and Harriet household, why should it matter if the happy trio are brothers, father or sons? And if Phil is only 14, well, maybe he’s mature for his age.

The ruling of Detroit Judge John Kirwan that pro-life demonstrators can carry signs that list the names of women who have had abortions makes me unspeakably angry. The enormity of publicizing what should be a private matter. I can report that they too are armed. The position of the NRA is too defensive. Why is there not a more confident attitude. They have to be aghast, but it would put them on the defensive. How is America going to compete when the rest of the world is not quite as crazy as us?

American banks must loan to muds, whether it is good business or not. American schools must pass muds with honors, whether or not they deserve it. American police must not chase mud criminals in mud neighborhoods lest their feelings be hurt. The American judiciary must approve gerrymandering so muds will be elected. The American military must promote muds (and women) regardless of their fighting ability. So just how is America going to compete when the rest of the world is not quite as crazy as us?

Race, Intelligence and Dysgenics

Even the harshest critics admit that Nobel laureate William Bradford Shockley (1910-1989) was a great physicist and inventor, his most famous contribution being the co-invention of the transistor. In the latter part of his career he turned his outstanding intellectual skills to the study of racial differences, eugenics (methods of hereditary improvement in man), and dysgenics (the intergenerational deterioration of the genetic heritage).

This collection of his essays on these subjects should appeal to both laymen and intellectuals. The preface, written by the distinguished psychologist Arthur Jensen, is an adequate summary of the ongoing controversy on racial differences in intelligence. The introduction, written by anthropologist Roger Pearson, gives the reader a clear explanation of Shockley’s views on race, eugenics and the problems he encountered in attempting to alert Western society about the “dysgenic threat.” At this point, however, the reader should be forewarned. While some of Dr. Shockley’s essays are readily intelligible, others are technical, pedantic, abstruse and understandable only to those who have had upper-level courses in statistics or population genetics.

The moral basis for Shockley’s work in the area of raciology (the scientific study of racial differences) can be summarized in a simple syllogism.

MAJOR PREMISE: Working for the welfare of man is consistent with all major religious and secular moral systems (pp. 232, 284).

MINOR PREMISE: The future welfare of man and the survival of civilization are dependent upon the quality of his genetic heritage (p. 15).

CONCLUSION: Therefore, working to ensure the best genetic heritage for the future is consistent with the religious and secular moral systems of our time (pp. 232, 284).

As Dr. Pearson explains in the introduction, Shockley’s thesis, which scared the daylights out of the political Left, is quite straightforward. Significant mental and behavioral differences, largely determined by the genes, separate the diverse races of mankind. Intelligence, a quality determined primarily by genetics and of the utmost importance to humankind in the struggle to survive, is not evenly distributed between individuals or races (pp. 18-19).

As he delved deeper into the subject, Shockley became more and more convinced that contemporary American society was undergoing rapid changes of a severely dysgenic nature. The less intelligent were producing considerably more offspring than the more intelligent (p. 18).

Shockley boldly examined the black I.Q. deficit

Although both white and black populations are threatened by the dysgenic process, Shockley insisted the problem is far more pronounced in the black community. The more intelligent blacks are taking advantage of increased equality of opportunity and are producing fewer children as they move into professional occupations (p. 22). Consequently, the average level of black intelligence would continue to decline as subsequent generations of blacks are produced at a higher rate by the less intelligent. This deleterious birthing process would result in an increasingly high proportion of the black population being found in the ghetto welfare class, despite all efforts to change this ratio by governmental intervention (p. 23).

If this view is correct, our well-intentioned welfare programs are unwittingly encouraging the most genetically disadvantaged blacks to produce a disproportionate number of children. The consequence of such a biological disaster will be extremes of racism and agony for both blacks and whites. Editor Pearson makes this point very clear:

Low I.Q. individuals are becoming increasingly unemployable in modern society, and consequently are prone not only to depend on others for their livelihood but to suffer intense frustration and anger at their state of dependency—frustration and anger which frequently gives way to bursts of destructive behavior (p. 32).
For eons of time, nature (or perhaps a Supreme Being, if He directed the course of evolution) selected mutations in the genetic code of lower organisms and gradually created man. Where natural selection left off, the eugenic practices of ancient societies took over. "Primitive cultures," Shockley noted, to improve the breed persisted no longer [in advanced societies]. Animals follow similar procedures. Social progress halted these brutalities for man—and good riddance it is [p. 232].

Modern man needs to understand these brutal eugenic methods in order to create humane substitutes. In accordance with this thinking, the physicist-turned-eugenicist proposed the following:

The First Amendment makes it safe for us in the U.S. to try to find humane eugenic measures. As a step in such search, I propose as a thinking exercise a voluntary sterilization bonus. . . .Payers of income tax [who tend to be somewhat successful already in society] would get nothing. Bonuses for all others, regardless of sex, race, or welfare status, would depend on best scientific estimates of hereditary factors in disadvantages such as diabetes, epilepsy, heroin addiction, arthritis, etc. At a bonus rate of $1,000 for each point below 100 I.Q., $30,000 put in trust for a 70 I.Q. moron potentially capable of producing 20 children might return $250,000 to taxpayers in reduced costs of mental retardation care [pp. 205-206].

It is important to emphasize that Shockley was never a "Nazi" as many of his detractors have falsely claimed. In WWII he was the director of research at the U.S. Navy's Anti-Submarine Warfare Operation Research Group. A strong supporter of the United States Constitution and Bill of Rights, he rejected totalitarian social programs and attempted to strike a balance between individual human rights and society's need for hereditary improvement. His eugenic proposals are fundamentally different from those proposed by Nazi eugenicists, as he advocated voluntary not compulsory sterilization.

Unlike many academics of our time, William Shockley was not afraid to voice his opposition to interracial marriage. In his celebrated 1980 Playboy magazine interview, he was asked by a black writer: "Are you for or against interracial marriage? Not as a scientific experiment but as a social reality?"

The Nobel laureate responded:

I'm going to say I certainly would not oppose an interracial marriage in any particular case that might come up. But I would not advocate it as a policy. One would have to know more about these facts [p. 267].

On standardized I.Q. tests blacks score an average of 15 points lower than the average white score of 100. This difference is consistent across different tests, and the scores themselves are not a bone of contention (p. 153). The controversy is over what causes this difference. Is it genetic in origin, or does it reflect environmental differences, or both? If both, to what degree does genetic inheritance contribute to the difference?

Many influential individuals and institutions disagree with Dr. Shockley's belief that the black I.Q. deficit is due primarily to genetics. In 1965, the U.S. Office of Policy Planning and Research stated: "There is absolutely no question of any genetic differential: Intelligence potential is distributed among Negro infants in the same proportion and pattern as among Icelanders or Chinese or any other group (p. 97)."

Consider Dr. Jensen's a priori argument against this viewpoint: "Since genetically conditioned physical characteristics differ markedly between racial groups, there is a strong . . .likelihood that genetically conditioned behavioral or mental characteristics will also differ."1

Arthur Jensen, also a believer in race differences

Support for this argument is provided by the fact that intelligence (or I.Q.) depends upon the physiological structure of the brain. The brain, like other organs, is subject to genetic influence, and there are marked biological differences between the brains of different races (p. 206).2 Therefore, how can anyone disregard the obvious possibility of genetically conditioned I.Q. differences between the races?

Shockley's environmentalist opponents would reject such reasoning, arguing that because there is a large genetic causation within racial groups does not necessarily suggest that the difference between the groups is genetically caused. More specifically, I.Q. differences between individual whites are caused primarily by genetics. The same is true for blacks, but the average I.Q. difference between the two groups could be largely, if not wholly, caused by non-biological environmental factors (p. 8).

Shockley understood this point as well as his detractors (p. 9). This is precisely why his research focused upon evidence which strongly suggested that the racial difference in I.Q. is primarily genetic in origin.

The environmentalists, Shockley declared, claim the black I.Q. deficit is caused by cultural deprivation, as well as anti-black prejudice and discrimination. They suppose that genetic differences between the races play no role.
Nevertheless, practically all the socioeconomic, educational, nutritional, and other health factors that sociologists have traditionally pointed to as causes of the black-white differences in I.Q. and scholastic achievement apply to the American Indian population, which ranks far below black standards (p. 117). According to egalitarians, American Indian I.Q. scores should be far lower than those of American blacks. Yet the opposite is the case. The well-documented Coleman Report of 1966 shows that Native Americans, overcoming far greater disadvantages, significantly outperform blacks in achievement and ability tests (pp. 116-17,154).

In a major San Francisco Bay area study white children of the lowest socioeconomic class had higher average I.Q. scores than those of black children from professional and managerial families (pp. 157-59). If intelligence is determined entirely by environment, then black families of high socioeconomic status must provide a substantially poorer intellectual environment than white families of low socioeconomic status. This flatly contravenes environmentalist assumptions.

If the lower I.Q. scores of American blacks are mainly caused by environmental deprivation, then eliminating it should equalize the average I.Q. scores of blacks and whites. Since the end of WWII, although significant progress has been made in reducing black cultural deprivation, this has not eliminated the black I.Q. deficit. Even Shockley's opponents admit that compensatory education has not narrowed the black-white I.Q. differential. As Dr. Jensen has noted, a group's "persisting resistance to change when subjected to a wide range of environmental conditions which are hypothesized to affect it, further enhances the plausibility that genetic factors are predominant [pp. 11-12]."

All of these results contradict environmentalist theory but are consistent with the hereditarian thesis that genetic differences are more important than environmental factors in determining black-white I.Q. differences.

Needless to say, the environmentalists are tenacious. Some go so far as to say that the concept of race is meaningless because races cannot be meaningfully defined (pp. 199, 216). Shockley's research undermined this claim; for black populations of low I.Q., each 1% of Caucasian ancestry raises average I.Q. by 1 point (pp. 177-78,199).

Shockley studied two groups of blacks, one from Georgia and another from California. He estimated the proportion of Caucasian genes within the two groups. (These genes, of course, were not present in the original slave populations.) The group with the higher I.Q. had a much greater proportion of Caucasian genes than the lower I.Q. group.

If the proportion of Caucasian genes was the same in both groups, or if the lower I.Q. group had the higher proportion of Caucasian genes, this would imply that cultural deprivation was mainly responsible for the lower I.Q.s. Since the brighter group had the higher percentage, this suggests that increases in percentages of Caucasian genes in black populations improves mental performance.

One of the most common environmentalist arguments is that I.Q. tests have a built-in cultural bias that discriminates against minorities. The tests are supposed to be unfair because they are based upon the language, knowledge and cognitive skills of the white middle class. Blacks in the United States, it is alleged, do not share in the same culture as whites. They assign different meanings to words, and store up different types of knowledge and acquire different intellectual skills.

Shockley noted that blacks tend to perform relatively better on the more "culture-loaded" or verbal kinds of tests (i.e., tests of vocabulary, general information, and verbal comprehension) than on the "culture-fair" tests of abstract reasoning ability (pp. 113, 161-62). The latter use non-verbal, symbolic material common to a great many cultures. Just the opposite is true for the Chinese, who score slightly above average on abstract reasoning tests but below average on the culture-loaded tests (p. 113,162).

If the tests of abstract reasoning ability really do discriminate against minorities, then why do the Chinese have a score that exceeds the average? And why do blacks do better on tests which are biased toward the white middle class than on tests which use symbolic material common to a great many cultures? Once again, these patterns contradict the environmentalist hypothesis but are consistent with Shockley's hereditarian theory.

A theory is considered scientific if it is empirically testable. The hereditarian thesis, highly plausible and supported by hard data, is of this nature. Although Shockley repeatedly stated that he had no inarguable scientific proof for his views, he believed they could be proven true. This is why he proposed "a serious scientific effort to establish by how much the distribution of hereditary potential for intelligence of our black citizens falls below whites [p. 152]."

The mass media, the American government and academia in general are hostile to efforts which could scientifically demonstrate a genetic difference in mental ability between the races, which is why Shockley's proposal was pigeonholed. This silent treatment is pregnant with disaster. Failure to comprehend and accept biologically based racial differences will inevitably chip away at white America's unique genetic heritage and raise the misery index for black Americans.

OBITUARIES

M. DIAMANTENHAUFEN, author and sociologist. Marvin Diamantenhaufen, 58, prize-winning Marxist sociologist and author of Few Who Knosh, considered by experts to be the definitive book on hunger politics, perished Saturday in a tragic accident. Accidentally strangled with his own 18K gold neck chain when it caught on the wheel of his golf cart at the Flowing Greens Country Club, he was dragged almost a mile before landing in a sand trap at the 15th, where caddie Guillermo Figueroa found his corpse. He is survived by his mother Esther and three ex-wives.

REV. F.T. FRANKLIN, Communist activist. Outspoken African-American community leader, Reverend Felonius T. Franklin, 49, known for organizing marches which blocked major urban arteries for days, was struck down yesterday with a coronary within minutes of being sentenced in a N.Y. Federal Court. He was facing the prospect of a year in jail, having been indicted for embezzling roughly $1,900,000 from the Africa Pride “March on Main Street” fund, money allegedly used to purchase condos, furs, automobiles and other gifts for unnamed companions. He is survived by his wife Thelmalina and five acknowledged children.

J. BRACERO, Latino advocate. On Tuesday a boating accident claimed the life of celebrated activist Jesus Angel del Rio Bracero, 31, long-time champion of immigration rights. INS authorities and border police were plagued for years by the civil disobedience of his vigilantes, who regularly sabotaged U.S. boundary fences, passed out life preservers and inflatable rafts, and widely distributed packages of Spanish-language directions on how to obtain social service benefits and welfare checks in the United States. Authorities still do not know what Bracero was doing on the Rio Grande at midnight and whether he was alone at the time.

Rep. X. deBATAILLE, congresswomyn. Rep. Xaviera deBataille, 62, prominent congresswomyn and originator of the controversial Mental Assault Amendment recently passed by the House, was fatally attacked Sunday by her lover, renowned psychiatrist Sylvia Funk. The tragedy came as a great surprise to all those who knew and worked with the couple. Sources remarked the pair had been under a great deal of stress due to the Hill fight over passage of the bill, which “establishes five-year minimum mandatory jail sentences for bumper stickers and t-shirts determined to be criminally offensive to People of Gender, Size, Looks, Color and Orientation.” Her body, lying next to a four-speed double-pronged marital aid which was still running, was discovered by friends on the floor of her kitchen Saturday. Police report that Dr. Funk is still at large.

K. KREEM, “Rainbow Rappa.” Kaffee Kreem, 22, popularly hailed mascot of multiculturalism, passed away Sunday. Dancing at a casual party after signing copies of his new album #@$%&!! at the Youf Center in East Los Angeles, he began to choke on an Oreo cookie. Witnesses watched aghast as he turned a purpler shade of tan, clutched his throat and collapsed. Attempts to employ what a center staff member called “the Hemlock Manoeover” succeeded only in fracturing the victim’s ribs, according to city pathologist Gahan Green. Kreem’s considerable estate, it is rumored, has been left to the United Negro College Fund.

M. ZAGOYIM, Rabbi. Rebbe Milken Zagoyim, director of the Yad Vashem International Monument Council, expired Friday in Reykjavik, Iceland, crushed under the weight of a new Holocaust Memorial Museum he was blessing. Having survived a recent scandal involving the fraudulent exhibition of several truckloads of old shoes he had purchased from Czechoslovakian military surplus, his next stop was Iceland, to dedicate the cited edifice “intended to serve as a reminder that the eternal suffering of the Jews should be forever burned into the world’s conscience.” While closely pursuing the Prime Minister during negotiations for a Yad Vashem gift shop and snack bar, he failed to notice the tumbling marble, which instantly flattened him. The World Jewish Congress has announced its intention to file suit against the contract builders, quarry owners, and the government and people of Iceland.

NAFTA’s Wake

When, last November, 234 harlots in the U.S. House of Representatives voted to ratify the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), they were merely formalizing the surrender of the U.S. to the Money Power. (By which is meant not only multinational corporations and international banking interests, but the general mind-set of those to whom trade, commerce, and the manipulation of peoples and resources for profit are more central to their being than are race, tradition, cultural values and family.)

Money has exercised effective control over the “free world” for decades. The official hoisting of the white flag by Congress with the NAFTA vote simply recognized this fact and, of course, publicized it as “good for America.”

The same solons who led the international economic boycott of South Africa because of what they referred to as that nation’s “human rights abuses” and “violations of democratic processes” presented to the Mafia-type gang that rules Mexico a trade agreement that will hasten the process of Third Worldizing these Disuniting States of America. Mexico, as opponents of NAFTA pointed out, is a one-party dictatorship, which has held power for generations by assassinating critics and dissidents (including many journalists), rigging elections, controlling labor unions and doling out massive bribes.

Mexico City spent at least $30 million to persuade the U.S. Congress to vote for NAFTA. Without doubt some of this money was earmarked for bribes and found its way into the pockets of our elected representatives—standard operating procedure south of the border. Clinton did considerable bribing himself, passing out a great variety of pork barrel projects to buy the “undecided” votes. (Those congressmen who were “undecided” in this much-discussed issue a few days before the vote were likely just waiting for more largesse. And they received it. Almost all the alleged “undecideds” voted for the pact.)

To “globalize” Western science, Western technology and Western industry is to destroy Western science, Western technology and Western industry. They were created by people sharing a common genetic history. To attempt to make the products of the Western scientific mind abstractions fit for universal application rather than for the benefit of the creators is to poison the source. It seemed symbolic that the two Democratic floor managers of the pro-NAFTA forces in Congress were a half-Mexican (and a close pal of the Mexico City gang) and a Japanese from California.

In the American past the able people of humble origin who were dissatisfied with their lot often headed for the frontier. Now the frontier is gone. Money drew much of this raw talent into its aegis, leaving the leaderless masses to be exploited and abused. The idea was that there was plenty of room at the top. But in one of those curious ironies of history, at the very time that Marxism was losing most of its adherents and much of its influence, one of its pivotal tenets was being realized: wealth of the kind that translates to power was being concentrated into fewer and fewer hands.

There is no longer much room at the top. On the bottom, economic decline provokes racial and cultural clashes and engenders a general psycho-spiritual tension that able and ambitious men will eventually mobilize to vault to overt power. Genuine leader-types in times of chaos-created opportunity will not likely be satisfied with the mere sniff of power and prestige dispensed by the CEO of some multinational diaper company or by a smiling Wall Street pygmy.

During the House debate a Negro congressman defending NAFTA stated that, in the modern world, military power had been superseded by economic power. Nowhere in the annals of history has this state of affairs lasted for long. The military spirit is created by the human soul in times of great distress and conflict. This spirit wields as its mightiest weapon the tradition of blood, honor and sacrifice. It beats Money into submission. It controls industry for racial-state purposes. It manages trade in the interest of political power. It has always done so wherever High Cultures can be even faintly traced, and it will do so again. Once loose in the land it sweeps men and events along in a tidal wave.

The anti-NAFTA coalition has potential for the future: organized labor, the mostly white and middle-class supporters of Perot, parts of the old liberal-left, the more militant environmentalists, and those few (very few) professional Republicans with some vestigial sense of nation and hostility to Money’s battering away at national sovereignty. This rather unique coalition played by the rules, but failed to protect Americans from the ravages of NAFTA. In the aftermath, Money not only publicly trumpeted its victory; it gloated over it. Since the emotions of the defeated will not easily fade, elements of the coalition may come together again, if not as a coherent political force, at least as a catalyst to keep the social stew well-stirred, thus greasing the skids for that historical force which will unseat the bankers, traders, political whores and assorted windliders who are now riding high.

American Gunfire

The gun war in this land never abates. Currently it is all about taxes on ammunition and a national waiting period. Governments generally wish to reserve all available firepower for themselves. National states are founded in vio-
A Case of Innocent Plagiarism?

When Instauration was started 18 years ago, we didn’t think we would have any trouble protecting our name. Instauration, a fairly common French word, is a fairly uncommon word in English. The word comes from the Latin instaurare, “to renew, restore.” English does not have a verb form, but does have the noun, Instauration, which means “restoration after decay, lapse or dilapidation.”

The folks at Christendom College, Fort Royal, Virginia, have used the Latin infinitive to headline their new newsletter. So be it. There’s nothing we can do about it; nothing we would want to do. If similar names cause any confusion, Christendom College is likely to be the loser. Instauration is becoming known—wrongly—as an anti-Christian publication. The last thing a religious college would want is to be associated with such a publication. Since guilt by association is rampant in the land, it might be advisable for Christendom College to find another title for its newsletter.
Affirmative Insecurity

The National Security Agency is an elite government agency which performs high tech communications functions within the Dept. of Defense. In keeping with its activist mentality, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has filed an absurd discrimination lawsuit against NSA. The basis for the allegations is the relative scarcity of blacks both within NSA and on the promotion lists, the de facto standard being that blacks should be hired and promoted in direct proportion to their numbers. Ever alert to the opportunity to grovel, the esteemed Senator Barbara Mikulski (D-MD) has joined in the public outcry for an investigation. (Aficionados of Maryland politics may be amused by her nickname: The Polish lesbian. Yes, she does have a roommate, which is why Linda Chavez kept talking about “San Francisco Democrats” during the 1992 election.)

The low minority representation at NSA simply reflects the fact that minorities do not major in those skills required by any large technically oriented organization—skills such as math, computer operations or engineering. NSA also has stringent security requirements which preclude hiring people with criminal records or bad habits. Applications from black males have to be checked carefully, considering that over 25% of them have criminal records.

Statistical comparisons to other government populations are meaningless, given the liberal dogma that the government is the employer of last resort. After all, how many blacks would you expect to be teaching at Harvard (sans affirmative action). The Government Services Administration (GSA) is a black preserve while the nearby Social Security Administration (SSA) is a jobs program for Baltimore’s blacks. The ineptitude of SSA employees is legendary. Easily half could be fired with no discernible effect. SSA is known locally as the Thom McAn [shoes] agency because it has 10,000 black loafers.

The black contingent at NSA reflects the usual distribution. It consists of a small (very small) competent cohort along with a much larger and quite mediocre group. The differences at the higher grade levels are so striking as to be embarrassing. A few executive-level blacks are almost illiterate. Expecting blacks to function adequately in a high-tech computer environment is a liberal delusion.

Many blacks honestly believe that work means coming in late, a minimum one-hour lunch, early departure, and gabbing on the phone. No great amount of malice is involved; working at a steady, sustainable pace for eight hours is simply a foreign concept to them. The problem may be some sort of attention deficiency. The proof is that the occasional industrious black usually rises quickly through the ranks. Despite the rhetoric about the blessings of diversity, can anyone demonstrate one successful instance of its use as a competitive advantage?

NSA has recently made several concessions to political correctness. One-third of recruiting trips will be to historically black colleges. Rather than visit schools with large engineering populations like Penn State or Rutgers, recruiters will trek to Boogaloo U. in a quixotic quest for a minority diamond in the rough. In addition, NSA policy now states that one-third of future promotions will be awarded to minorities.

The reaction among white NSA employees is a combination of apoplexy and contempt. Their perception is that NSA has already bent over backwards to promote minorities and that management has tried to “make the numbers right” to the point of instituting an explicit quota system for promotions. The situation is exacerbated by minority members who blatantly exploit and flaunt their privileged status. The effects on morale are already obvious. A larger percentage of a smaller and more austere promotion pool being awarded to marginal blacks will simply intensify awareness of black deficiencies and reinforce the perception that blacks can’t make it on their own.

Are black leaders too stupid to realize the implications of their actions? The NAACP is doing what the KKK could only fantasize about: creating a new generation of racists. Ironically white NSA employees (like most civil servants) tend to be fairly liberal. It is bad enough to provoke your enemies; it is absolutely senseless to inflame
The sad and farcical behavior of Reginald Denny

Nouveau Victim

As the tendentiousness of the Reginald Denny case slowly fades from memory, its nihilistic legacy endures. If possessed with even the most basic intelligence and understanding of the facts, one should be able to see that "mob rule" has taken over the justice system in California courts. By now everyone has read or viewed on television the blow-by-blow coverage of both the Denny and Rodney King trials. Most Americans have watched in disbelief the systematic dismantling of our legal system's fairness and due process, only to be replaced by a disgusting form of political appeasement. The results are a nightmarish scene whereby the police are rounded up and imprisoned for enforcing the law, while common criminals are spared appropriate punishment for their lawlessness. More disgusting is the docile and phlegmatic public that accepts this rank injustice with increasing regularity.

The opprobrious outcome of these two trials has demonstrated that the black race is acquiring a status heretofore reserved for Jews—the "victimization" status which allows freedom from prosecution, criticism and accountability. This woeful state of affairs should draw attention to the apocalyptic consequences which, if not curbed, will surely be brought to bear on the white race. What everyone seems to be unable to understand is Reginald Denny's attitude concerning his near demise at the hands of the black throwbacks. Watching his sickening and incredible courtroom performance—hugging the thugs' relatives and his reconciliatory blubberings—was like viewing a typical Hollywood race-mixing film. At one point Denny proceeded to make the incredible statement that he was "relieved" by the verdicts and actually went so far as to state that he thought one of his attackers should "go free!" How the homeboys must be laughing at this feeble white "chump."

Denny, in case he doesn't know it, is just plain lucky to be alive. His attitude in court, however, should not be construed as a simple gesture of Christian charity or some warped "we are all brothers" notion. His actions speak more of a man with a death wish. Still, one has to wonder what could possibly have been going through his head as his attackers were pummeling him to near extinction. Is the damage to his brain responsible for his incomprehensible courtroom mouthings? Is he just another goofy California liberal who has had too much multiculturalism jammed down his throat by media ideologues? Worse still, could he be the fabled "dark abyss," which provides us with a glimpse of the dismal future that awaits us all?

Reginald Denny may be the stereotype of the emerging "acquiescent" white, the nouveau victim, the man who hates himself so bitterly that he feels death is too good for him. The black prosecution team couldn't have wished for a better victim. Denny's insufferable "goodwill" actually gave an air of legitimacy to an outrageously unjust series of verdicts which, based on the seriousness of the crimes committed, resulted in punishments for the two blacks that were no more than legal slaps on the wrist.

P.T. Barnum's revelation, "There's a sucker born every minute," has never been more relevant. No self-respecting individual, regardless of his religion or politics, would sit by and calmly allow such an execrable trial to free one of the bestial white haters and barely punish the other.

Larry King, one of the many culture vultures sympathetic to the defendants, egregiously insinuated, as only Larry can, that the verdicts were "appropriate," given the "frustration" of Los Angeles blacks. One apologetic editorialist stated that premeditated murder wasn't possible in the minds of the two black thugs because, "There wasn't a second brick thrown!" The press, of course, dutifully fell in line, as it played down the obvious racist motives of the assailants.

Looking at it from Denny's point of view, maybe it's too bad he wasn't killed. After all, what better way to turn the other cheek than sitting next to the Creator.

JOHN ANDREW MASON
Think Twice About That Third World Vacation

So much has been made of the horrific spread of AIDS in the Third World it's understandable that some folks may have come away with the impression that the common, old-timey tropical maladies—malaria, leishmaniasis, African trypanosomiasis, Chagas' disease, schistosomiasis, lymphatic filariasis, onchocerciasis and leprosy—have been conquered. Brother, perish the thought. All told, roughly 500 million diseased souls live out their dreckish Third World lives infected with such viruses and bugs. Out of a total population of 1.6 billion scattered through 121 tropical countries, nearly one in three is afflicted. Each year other diseases than AIDS kill almost 2 million. The survivors go about their grotesque lives suffering the crippling effects of anemia, blindness, brain damage and gross physical deformities. In the developed nations, drugs and insecticides treat and control these scourges. In the Third World they're allowed to multiply for reasons that inspire endless argument among development economists.

Basically, two schools of thought slug it out. The first, heard most often in and about the World Bank and other quasi-academic institutions, focuses on an inadequate technical infrastructure. "If we can only shift the assistance delivery mechanism from 'horizontal' to 'vertical,' we'll achieve wonders," goes the line. The other school, which has a more racialist approach, might as well be called "Instaurational," because it looks into the very souls of the people involved. "He who can help himself, will" goes the line. "Those who don't, can't." But whether it's the ying or the yang of the argument that's true, one thing is for certain: many Third World resources available for spending on medical care are currently being wasted on the nations' military establishment. As a percentage of GNP, Third World governments spend a third more on arms than the industrialized West—16% vs. 12%.

Will somebody please tell Hillary-Billy Clinton about this? Meanwhile, Instaurationalists taking that spring cruise to the Caribbean better be careful whom they cozy up to.

What About Those Jewish Schindlers?

What interested me about the film Schindler's List, Steven Spielberg's Christmas holiday offering, was the way it emphasized, not the moral courage displayed by Herr Schindler in his rescue of all those Jews from Nazi Sturm und Drang, but an unflattering expose of the man's obsessive materialism, his "what's in it for me" syndrome. With one or two twists of the ethical knife, Spielberg made Schindler-the-swindler, a man whose every action reeks of egotism, into Schindler-the-savior.

We watch Schindler join the Nazi Party solely for personal gain. We watch him treat the Jewish workers in his Polish factory as little better than slaves.

The film director's transmogrification of Schindler strips his deeds of any human (moral) value. For if Schindler is really such a foul fellow, then it must have been a kind of beatific vision from the Deity Himself that inspired him to save all those Jews from Himmler's meat grinder. It's a clever way of denying Schindler his due, but a little too clever.

Oddly enough, this writer once knew the daughter of a man who could have been a "Jewish" Schindler, if he had cared enough for his people. He was a wealthy Dresden textile manufacturer whose mills back in the 1920s and the early 1930s employed large numbers of Jews and non-Jews at virtually starvation wages. With his Reichmark profits translated into bags of gold and heaps of precious stones, he managed to catch what Spielberg in the years before he was a "genius." was practically the fast train out of Nazi Germany, landing at the prettified seaside resort city of Punte del Este, Uruguay, with only his wife and daughter in tow. Left behind were hundreds of relatives and hundreds of Jewish and non-Jewish employees, many of whom failed to survive WWII.

Daughter Beth, who worked for the Inter-American Development Bank in Washington (DC), lived in the same apartment house I did for five years in the early 1970s. We became fast friends. Beth no more liked German Nazis than does Spielberg. Her outlook, however, had been softened by a childhood spent in the balmy climes of South America. Extensive travel (and perhaps a bit of genetic inheritance thrown in) gave Beth an uncanny understanding of people which she generously shared with me, in her strange mixture of German and Spanish, over endless coffees.

We drifted apart on the matter of Israel, Beth having become a habitué of a social set heavily infested with agents of Israeli intelligence. The two worlds, I concluded, couldn't have been further apart. Eventually marrying a non-Jew, Beth often visited her parents in Uruguay, who by then were deep in their eighties.

Post-WWII Latin America became a home to an entire world of Jewish refugees, who escaped with sufficient gelt to finance generations of indolence. Their leave-taking from Germany, however, seems to have been as devoid of moral fiber as were some of Schindler's actions. Spielberg's cinematic effort at denigrating Schindler should have a sequel examining all those Jewish immoralists found in Latin America, folks whose abandonment of their people had the stink of a barnyard. Wonder if Steve's up to that? Somehow, I think not.

More About Schindler

Never forgive, never forget and never stop filming. Schindler’s List is the latest in the unending series of movie and TV shows about a happening in Europe a myriad of moons ago that involved Germans and Jews, not Americans. The Holocaust, by the way, is the one historical event that cannot be debated in any Western country. In Europe anyone who even tries to debate it is denounced an anti-Semite and could end up behind bars.

Instauration has always been skeptical about the Holocaust, not only because it has now become a quasi-crime to question it, but because of its price tag. At least $150 billion in private and public funds, chiefly from the U.S. and Germany, have been poured into the coffers of Israel and into the pockets of hundreds of thousands of soi-disant “survivors.” And there is no end to this huge payoff in sight. An oleaginous outfit called Children of the Holocaust is already gearing up for second-generation reparations.

Putting all the tribute and all the hype aside, however, if an honest debate about the Holocaust was held and if all the facts and evidence buttressed the argument of the pro-Holocaust advocates, Instauration would join the Six Million true believers.

The politically correct stricture against bad-mouthing the Holocaust also applies to Steven Spielberg’s film. Practically all the critics swooned. Only one or two of the Chosen dared to strike a negative note. Frank Rich of the N.Y. Times described the film as a 3-hour propaganda piece. He even went so far as to say that the #1 Nazi villain, played by British actor Ralph Fiennes, actually ran away with the picture, because most of the other characters were two-dimensional. Always in there pitching for Jewish money and Jewish votes, Clinton “implored everyone to go see the film.”

Schindler’s List was as much a celebration of Spielberg’s Jewishness as it was of the story of a hard-hearted German entrepreneur miraculously metamorphosing into a soft-hearted savior of 1,000-plus Jews. The film might also have been Spielberg’s way of getting even with a couple of old schoolmates who, he claims, twice bloodied his nose because he was a Jew.

Spielberg has three children, one a full-blooded Chosenite by his Jewish ex-wife, Amy Irving, and two half-Semitic kids by Kate Capshaw, a Gentile who converted to Judaism at her husband’s urging. In other words, despite all his tribal protestations, Spielberg gave his Jewish spouse the gate and married a non-Jew, not exactly the kind of marital behavior that delights rabbis. For good measure and to demonstrate their impasioned ecumenicalism, the Spielberg’s have adopted a five-year-old black.

Suppose one fine day the Holocaust might—just might—prove to be a Jewish fairy tale? What then would all those movie folk do with the mega-reels of outdated cinematic claptrap? Meanwhile, when will Spielberg and all the Spielberg clones get around to making some pictures about Stalin, who killed five or ten times as many Russians as Germans killed Jews? Or will the ratio that one dead Jew equals a dozen dead non-Jews hold forever in Tinseltown?

Still More About Schindler

Before launching into his fawningly predictable review of Schindler’s List, Gene Siskel, the cloutful Jewish movie critic whose hugely overweight partner, Roger Ebert, is married to a black, lamented over a recent poll that indicated one in three Americans believe it’s possible the Holocaust never happened.

To revisionists it’s a cause for exhilaration not lamentation. After more than 400 feature films, countless docudramas, thousands of TV programs, novels, newspaper and magazine articles and radio shows, a “Remembrance Week” each April, a national and several local museums, the wholesale insistence on the absolute authenticity of history’s pivotal “event” by clergymen and politicians across the religious and political spectrum. . .after all this, we may venture the opinion that the Chosen are at long last beginning to overlay their hand. Mr. & Mrs. Joe Sixpack (and perhaps Mr. & Ms. Ted Egghead) may slowly be rebelling and begrudging starting to think for themselves. Spielberg’s film may have unintentionally assisted Holocaust revisionism; “The Lady Doth Protest Too Much” syndrome may finally be sinking in. Fellow Instaurationists take heart. The day of reckoning may be sooner rather than later.

Forget Clinton’s Peccadilloes

Clinton’s favorite hat seems to be a Jewish yarmulke. He wears it so often that he must carry one in his pocket. On his recent jaunt to Europe almost the moment he arrived in Czechoslovakia he donned it for a tour of a Jewish cemetery. It’s amazing that on such a tight schedule he found time to mourn a bunch of extinct foreign Chosenites.

Generally when a person decks himself out in the religious garb of another faith, it can be interpreted as a gesture of courtesy, though cynics might say that in the case of a yarmulke it’s an act of reverence, not to the Jewish religion, but to the high-octane Jewish money that fuels Democratic political campaigns.

Praying to Yahweh for campaign funds?

All the yarmulkes in the world, however, haven’t saved Clinton from some embarrassing media attacks on his Don Juanish behavior towards almost any female that comes within his purview. Arkansasayers in the know believe that in the number of beddings he is up there with such historical figures as Julius Caesar, Henry VIII and Napoleon. In statecraft, on the other hand, he ranks with Michael Dudakis, Ildi Amin and Henry Kissinger.

As far as can be ascertained, Hillary has not been photographed with a yarmulke pinned to her routinely blondined locks. Surely she wouldn’t object to the “honor.” But it may be that Jews restrict their skullcaps to male skulls.

Some naive Majority members wonder why the media is going after Clinton, who has often been the political icon of the press corps, especially during his splendidious, semi-royal, wintry progress from Brussels to Moscow to Geneva. The so-called impact media don’t particularly like to run bimbo stories, but when they are continuously blown up by their poor cousins, the low-circulation right-wing newspapers and newsletters, the media giants have to jump aboard. (Though they haven’t yet reached the point where they attribute Vincent Foster’s death to Hillary breaking off their rumored ten-year love affair.)
To Instauration all the hoopla for and against Clinton signifies nothing. So what if he has a bad case of satyriasis and is every lady's man? So what if Hillary kept to open a crooked S&L until it collapsed, at a cost to the U.S. Treasury of $50 million! Almost every professional politician in the same circumstances would do the same. Clinton's real crime, however, is none of the above. His real crime, once he was established in the White House, has been to devote his relatively high I.Q. not only to the decline and fall of his country, but also to the decline and fall of his race.

Forget Clinton's Romeo of the Ozarks antics. But don't forget he's one of the shrewdest race traitors to come down the pike since FDR. In a way, he's a second Ted Kennedy, except that Stick Willie has brains and, unlike stumbling Fat Face, knows very well what he's doing. If he knew French, Clinton's favorite aphorism would have to be Louis XV's Après moi le déluge.

Charity Doesn't Begin at Home

In the District of Columbia, one out of 67 women of child-bearing age is AIDS-infected. That's 10 times the national average. The rate for D.C. prostitutes is so high it's almost inconceivable that half a hundred of the city's "leading ladies" find their date cards filled each night by suburban Johns cruising the 14th Street "corridor," a main artery out to the lush Montgomery County (MD) suburbs and a financial burden for the District's welfare system. Caring for these thousands of tragic kids (and their crack-addicted siblings) has devolved to religious charities funded mostly by people in the white suburbs. Yet, it's D.C. blacks who claim credit for expressing their "soul-caring" for such examples of "soul-culture."

Hedging His Bets

Leveraged buxom artist Theodore Forstmann, long-time chum and racial cousin of Ivan Boesky, is the big money man. Bennett and Kemp, who receive "salaries" from EP in the same range as Weber, are also on the payroll of the Heritage Foundation. Bennett banked $89,000 in 1992 for his role as a Distinguished Scholar. Heritage chief-tain Edwin Feulner, married to a Jewess, "earned" $360,000 in pay and bonuses.

Aside from Forstmann, EP is milking the goats through direct-mail appeals directed by a Virginia company, Response Dynamics Inc. A past RDI project was "Americans For Bush," which hatched the famous Willie Horton TV ads. The hucksters expect to raise at least $3 million this year to advance Kemp and Bennett's "conservative" agenda.

Forstmann, having recently turned over chairmanship of EP to Malcolm S. Forbes Jr., is now schmoozing with Republican Senate chief Bob Dole, to whose private foundation he recently mailed a $50,000 check. Jude Wanniski, a former Wall Street Journal editorial writer, champion of "supply side" economics and long-time associate of Forstmann, has been assigned to tutor the Kansas Senator, who has been known to criticize "supply side" economics and aid to Israel.

Mover & Shaker

The man pulling the strings of Rudolph Giuliani, the newly elected mayor of New York City, is Raymond B. Harding, who, as Branko Hochwald, was born 58 years ago in a village in Croatia. In 1941 young Branko was taken by his Jewish parents to Italian-controlled Yugoslavia, on to Northern Italy and then south to Calabria. His family was allegedly "liberated" by members of the British 8th Army's Palestine brigade (composed of Chosenites).

The Hochwalds finally made it to Oswego (NY), thanks to a refugee application endorsed by FDR's Interior Secretary Harold Ickes. After the war, the Hochwalds moved to East Harlem. In 1951 they became the Hardings, inspired by the David Harding, Counterpny radio thriller of that era.

Harding/Hochwald is credited with playing a crucial role in Giuliani's victory over incumbent blackamoor David Dinkins. He fixed it so that the Republican candidate could also run on the Liberal Party line, enabling Zoo Cityites who would never vote Republican to vote for Giuliani.

Rudi's backers have learned that if you want to land a plum job, you'd best get your résumé to Mr. H., not the Mayor's transition-team office.

When he's not huddling with His Honor, the 250-pound-plus power broker advises his top client, the government of Croatia. As Harding modestly says, "If after all these years I'm at the state where people value my political advice, I'm happy."

Unlike Likenesses

Ever notice how the police drawings of wanted criminals generally make the crooks look much better than they are in the flesh? The police concept of the murderer of Polly Klaas, Richard Davis, who is obviously part Indian or Hispanic, gave him a distinguished mien. Police drawings of Negro criminals on the lam generally make them look all or part white, as if it is offensive to show their true skin color.
Chart Buster

As predicted, accused murderer and rap star Calvin Broadus, a.k.a. Snoop Doggy Dogg, has one of the hottest record albums in history, with more than 800,000 copies of Doggy Style sold in its first week. Last summer, the Long Beach (CA) native was at the wheel of his Jeep when his bodyguard shot and killed Phillip Woldemariam, someone Broadus didn’t happen to like.

The hit song on the album, What’s My Name?, has the skinny Congoid rapping:

rolling with my bitch
that’s where you might find me, she want the g with the biggest d, and who’s that? He is I and I am he.

Mr. Broadus/Dogg is out strolling the streets after posting a $1-million bail bond.

Queer U.

Yale has funneled $250,000 into a Lesbian and Gay Studies program with endowed professorships and visiting scholars. One thousand of Yale’s 10,000 students attend the biannual dance that climaxes Gay and Lesbian Awareness Days. A publication, My Tongue, replete with hardcore photos of homosexual contortions, has been distributed throughout the campus. One hundred copies were displayed for two weeks outside the office of Graduate School Dean Richard Levin, with the Jewish educator’s assent. Soon afterward Levin was installed as Yale’s 22nd president and Judith Rodin, the originator of the Lesbian and Gay Studies program, was installed as president of the University of Pennsylvania. Since Harvard, Princeton and Yale have Jewish presidents, are there any major universities left still in the hands of WASPs, whose forebears founded these once great institutions of higher learning?

Plagiarist Poetess

She read a rather overwrought poem at Clinton’s inauguration, for which she was widely hailed in the media, not just for her poetry but for her blackness. It wasn’t known at the time that Maya Angelou was a skilled plagiarist on the order of Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. A Southern white lawyer, Norton F. Tennille Jr., wrote to Ms. Angelou that his 1985 poem which began, “Rock, rope, river, hands. . . ” strangely resembled Maya’s poem, which began, “a rock, a river, a tree. . . .” Even curioser, both poems were structured throughout with those images. Angelou, who confesses she was once a madam and a prostitute, is now a $100,000-a-year professor at Wake Forest, where she seldom shows up for class.

A collection of Picasso’s paintings and drawings recently sold for $32 million at a Sotheby auction in Zoo City. The above black and white crayon self-portrait of the artist brought $475,000. The people who buy such doodles are as responsible as the doodlers themselves for making a mockery of Western art.

Passing for Nonwhite

Mark Imburgia, 30, a Chicago firefighter, who always passed as a Hispanic, was promoted to lieutenant, a promotion only available to minorityites. Imburgia had sworn his maternal grandmother was born in Argentina, a claim disputed by conscientious researchers said grandma was born in Illinois, as was his mother. When the Latino group finally made its point, Imburgia was promptly demoted. Since he is no longer a Hispanic, just what is he? The city fathers now commemorate him as a white. But what kind of a white? Imburgia is not exactly a Northern European name. At any rate, more authentic Hispanic quickly and quota-ishly filled the lieutenantcy vacated by the less authentic Hispanic. In the old days minorityites who had the required physical delineations tried to pass for Majority members. As the Imburgia imbroglio shows, it may not be long before Majority members in search of a job try to pass for minorityites.

White Wiggers

It had to come. Genes are pretty powerful things, but they have difficulty standing up to the all-pervasive, round-the-clock, minority-oriented drumbeat which goes on in the nation’s classrooms and irradiates 24 hours a day from the winking blue tube. Take the matter of talking, acting and “wearing” black. Everything to do with Negroes has been praised so repetitively and so sedulously in the media and in the school yard that some white kids are beginning to think it’s cool to talk, act and dress like blacks. In one Nashville high school, where the whites call themselves “wiggers,” the boys often wear shorts 15 sizes too large and shave their hair down to the scalp to achieve what is called a “butt-fade.” The white girls braid their hair a la Whoopi Goldberg, wear baggy “boiler-suits” with one shoulder strap hanging loose and padding in the seat. Some of the blackwashed kids will only date blacks. Oprah Winfrey did a show on this dysonic topic last year. Blacks have mixed feelings about the wiggers. Some say the name comes too close to what one black columnist, Dwight Lewis, describes as “the worst racial slur in the history of the English language.”

But a ray or two of hope still gleams. White girls in a rural high school in Indiana who act and dress too black have been jeered and harassed by their male classmates. Four female copycats of Negro fashions couldn’t take it and quit, at least temporarily. Five of their white male critics have been suspended. Apparently some young white males still retain a few of the instincts needed to keep a high civilization from sinking into a low one.

Forbidden Words

Considering that the publisher of the Los Angeles Times is David Lavenholt, soon to be replaced by Richard T. Schlossberg III, considering that the chairman of Times Mirror, the parent company of the L.A. Times, is Robert Erburu, considering all the other minority types that infest the upper reaches of the West Coast’s leading newspaper, it could almost be predicted that sooner or later the Times would assemble a committee of inquisitors to formally proscribe various “offensive” terms that heretofore slipped out of the word processors of its reporters and rewrite men. Here’s a brief sampling of some words that will no longer be allowed to offend the eyes of Times’ readers. Dutch treat, mailman, babe, biddy, bra-burner, divorcée, Eskimos, gal, ghetto, gypped, Hispanic, Indian, inner city, lame, pow-wow, queer, welsher, Jewess.

Christmas Postmortems

It’s not just adult Jews who can’t stand to hear the first syllable in Christmas and can’t stand the sight of Santa Claus. It’s Jewish teens like 13-year-old Tiffany Tropp, an eighth grader at a high school in Concord (NH). Tiffany (now there’s a good old Jewish moniker) was deeply offended by all the caroling and by the Christmas decorations in the school cafeteria. Principal Pam Melanson half surrendered. She agreed to take down the Merry Christmas signs, but not the Santa Claus cutouts. The students took out their resentment on Tiffany by parading through the school hallways wearing Santa Claus hats while singing Silent Night. Whereupon Tiffany again complained saying that the lyrics of Silent Night disturbed her greatly because of their religious allusions.

It’s the old story. They have the power to take away or dilute our holidays, while forcing on us such alien holidays as King Christmas decorations in the school cafe­teria. Whereupon Tiffany again complained saying that the lyrics of Silent Night disturbed her greatly because of their religious allusions.

It’s the old story. They have the power to take away or dilute our holidays, while forcing on us such alien holidays as King Christmas decorations in the school cafeteria. Principal Pam Melanson half surrendered. She agreed to take down the Merry Christmas signs, but not the Santa Claus cutouts. The students took out their resentment on Tiffany by parading through the school hallways wearing Santa Claus hats while singing Silent Night. Whereupon Tiffany again complained saying that the lyrics of Silent Night disturbed her greatly because of their religious allusions.

Looking Up Something? Older Is Better

Instauration's coverage of the Jewish takeover of Bartlett's Familiar Quotations (Dec. 1993) was well done. The same phenomenon extends to other reference classics from the Encyclopaedia Britannica to Merriam-Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, the world's most widely used English lexicon. The latter defines "holocaust" as "the mass slaughter of European civilians and esp. Jews by the Nazis during WW II." The same entry states that the word derives from the Latin and Greek. One small correction, John Bartlett (1820-1905) was an American from Massachusetts, not an Englishman. He owned a bookstore in Cambridge (MA) and later became a partner in Little Brown & Co., which still publishes revised editions of his opus.

Many classic reference works published before 1960 are still available in used bookstores. They don't cover events of the past 30 years or so, but what they do cover and the citations they provide reflect a pro-Majority sentiment. The same is true all across the literary board, from children's literature without interracial playmates to adult fiction and to nonfiction. The works are informative, entertaining and a worthy substitute for the contemporary anti-Majority media.

When it comes to the question of acquiring reference media for Majority households, older is definitely better. Those who desire to stay in touch with the present have a narrow choice. They must rely on Instauration and the few other pro-Majority publications which tell it like it is.

Lay Off the Armenians

I am disturbed by the unflattering remarks that have been printed in Instauration regarding Armenians. Having had the good fortune to have several Armenian friends, I've been impressed by their character and intelligence. My acquaintances are all in the professions. They are noted not for avarice, but for altruism in their relationships with clients and colleagues. In appearance they are indistinguishable from most whites. Perhaps Armenians are skilled in trade, but that is no vice. Indeed more of us should have such skills. Despite dispersal and genocide, the Armenian people have endured. This is another skill not to be scorned.

I urge Instauration to cease future attacks on Armenians. The white race includes many nationalities. United we will stand. Disunited we won't.

Lay Off the Welsh

Ivan Hild's article (Nov. 1993) left much to be desired. Please inform this gentleman that we Welsh Americans do not take kindly to his ethnic sneers. Although whites—all whites—are supposed to stick together for the common cause, along comes Mr. Hild who proceeds to put the knock on Wales (of all countries!), Poland and Italy. In days gone by my initial reaction would have been okay, go ahead and flick your barbs at the Italians if you must. After all, they brought the Mafia to these shores—the same outfit which has long been in cahoots with the Jews, enriching our culture with such boons as hardcore porn. Knock the Poles too, if you wish, although this is asinine since they possess many priceless Northern European genes, a fact to which any moron with eyes can attest.

Today, however, I no longershrug when groups like these are slighted. They are with us in the common struggle and should be treated with the respect they deserve. But over and above all this I have to make one strident demand: don't stick up your (presumably) Teutonic nostrils when you pass a Welshman. We're as Northern European as any of you and deeply resent the shantytown label you seemingly want to tag us with. Contrary to popular opinion, Wales is not—nor has it ever been—a slum heap. It's a beautiful little Celtic land with an ancient and proud history, as well as a unique culture. I might add that 18 of the 56 signatories of the Declaration of Independence were of direct Welsh descent! My own ancestors, who rooted around in the ground like moles to provide the English with coal, came to this country in the mid-19th century and dug the stuff out of Kentucky seams, practically with their fingernails. That coal kept a lot of WASP and Dutch backsides warm during the harsh Yankee winters. Let me end by quoting what a ghost once said to Ebenezer Scrooge and I say to Ivan Hild, "Forebear that wicked can't"—until you know what you're talking about.

WELSH—AND BLOODY WELL PROUD OF IT!

Fred's Less Furious

Furious Fred did much better in December than in previous issues. Since I criticized him then, I would like to commend him now. The style this time was just as lively but less pretentious. More substance and fewer frills reflect a lot of hard thinking. I do not believe, however, that all the different groups he names are conspiring, either consciously or unconsciously, to drag humanity down to the level of the lowest common denominator. The bulk of humanity has always shuffled along at or near that level, needing no dragging down because it was already there. In all ages and in all countries it is only "the happy few" (Stendhal's phrase) who manage to ascend.

Anti-Feminist Feminist Holds Forth

I noticed the subscriber complaining in the December issue about the use of "man" vs. "human." "Man," I agree, was fine as a general term. In my further comments I hope I didn't come off as a raging feminist. More often than not I have managed to enrage local feminists with my criticisms of their petty institutional solutions, blind socialism, reverse sexism and anti-family manhating viciousness. I'm a race-conscious, family-oriented individualist, I guess. I'm not a Moral Majority type. I acknowledge biological differences which must necessarily create different roles for the sexes in society, especially in the military. Men have every damned right to want fellow soldiers to be up to snuff physically and strong enough to do everything that every other soldier can do.

I hate seeing women drop their kids off at day-care centers and abandon them to the public schools. I'd never do that to mine. I don't agree that standards of any kind should be lowered simply to let more "diversity" in, though I generally find some kinds of diversity entertaining, as it makes for good company. Too many of the racially conscious men I meet are real meatheads (army types, Christian crusaders, fraternity beerhounds, biker gang types, punk-skinheads). They really do seem to resent intelligent women. One insecure fraternity type guy in college used to roughly shove me or my desk on his way out of the classroom if I'd volunteered too many answers that day. Heck, I'd probably have laughed at his snail trail jokes. What was his problem? These Texe Marrs types are creepy. They see conniving women lurking behind every aspect of school politics. C'mon, we're not all out to getcha.

Women love to criticize Nazi Germany, but I always point out that Hanna Reitsch was the Third Reich's preeminent test pilot. Why does Gaddafi have a female garde du corps? Why are female terrorists considered more dangerous? Why was the FBI order of the day, according to Bo Gritz, "Take Vicki out first"? The maternal impulse is a powerful thing, a binding force, especially when extended to the protection of a more general and metaphorical family—the race. Why do women abandon their children to the state? Labor-saving devices moved them into the workforce, it's true, but somewhere along the line, the acculturation of our children became relegated to a menial and unimportant status. It may be suicide for our people.

The Editor Shouldn't Stop Editing

Wilmot Robertson does seem to edit everything he gets ahold of. This is certainly true of my articles. I would say a third of the time his changes are an improvement, a third the opposite, and a third of no consequence. Once he slipped in a gratuitous insult to Jews in an article that had nothing to do with them. The result was that I couldn't send a xerox of the article to certain parties. On the other hand, he toned down my rejection of the Holocaust to just raising doubts. This was a nice assist.

The great H.L. Mencken did the same thing when editing the American Mercury. Menckenisms, like "rumble bumble" instead of "mumbo jumbo," abound in Mercury articles. At this remove, I suspect that the main reason for reading old copies of Mercury is for Mencken, not for the magazine's other contributors. So it may well prove to be true of the Robertsonisms in Instauration.

Most of Robertson's editing is to reduce the length of articles. A page runs about 7,200 characters. If you submit something about that length, he won't edit it much. Send a longer one and he is likely to cut in places not always to your liking. When this happened to me, I thought the cuts made the article clumsy and left out many good points. But rereading the articles many months later, I found they did read smoothly. The omitted pearls of wisdom can be worked into later literary effusions.

ROBERT THROCKMORTON

Musings on Music

I have read many articles and letters in Instauration to which I have been tempted to reply, but I could not resist responding to the Canadian subscriber's "How Pure Can Instaurationists Afford to Be?" (Oct. 1993). The author suggests we "ignore the cultural output of the last 40 years," and spend our time listening to the metaphoric family—the race. Why do women abandon their children to the state? Labor-saving devices moved them into the workforce, it's true, but somewhere along the line, the acculturation of our children became relegated to a menial and unimportant status. It may be suicide for our people.

Aside from the decidedly "unwholesome" effects of 1930s and 40s popular entertainment, the author seems to ignore other parts of this issue. Despite all the alien influence operating in the entertainment industry, many of the best talents were and still are Aryan. Jewish showbiz moguls have exploited this talent to serve their own purposes (or just to make a buck), but this does not mean that the Aryan creative spirit is dead. Perhaps it has merely found new outlets. One has to look outside the mainstream pop culture to discover the best our race has to offer.

The late 1960s and early 1970s saw a veritable explosion of Aryan creativity, particularly in music. There is a theory, which makes a kind of intuitive sense, proposed by Chosenite Noam Chomsky and others, that the psychedelic revolution and its accompanying creative catharsis so frightened the powers that be that it led them to clamp down even tighter on the entertainment industry, co-opt what they could and banish the rest to obscurity or "cult" status. This tactic continues to be used quite effectively, making it more and more difficult to step outside the bounds of the omnipresent pop culture.

Perhaps a comment is due here on the music of the "psychedelic era." Most of this music is loosely classified as "rock," and some will undoubtedly point out that Negro blues and jazz were prominent influences. While this is undeniably true, as it is also true of the swing music of the Big Band era, the best of this music combines these influences with folk, classical and sometimes bluegrass, country and other ethnic forms. It is as if, in this brief era, these diverse influences were poured into a transforming crucible, and a new expression of Aryan creativity was born. I realize that most of us are somewhat partial to the music of our youth, but I find more Aryan spirit in the music of Jefferson Airplane, Jethro Tull, or Led Zeppelin than in all the bland popular music of the 1930s and 40s combined.

One of the most positive developments in recent years is the revival of Celtic folk music on both sides of the Atlantic. Interestingly enough, this revival can be traced in part to such folk-rock bands as Steeleye Span and Fairport Convention (also of late 1960s, early 1970s vintage). These groups made the traditional music of the British Isles come alive for a new generation.

The so-called "New Age" genre also has become a haven for many talented musicians and composers not caught in the sticky web of contemporary pop culture. Much of this music draws heavily on traditional and classical European sources. A race-conscious variety of heavy metal rock music has emerged from the ranks of skinheads both in the U.S. and abroad. Even the vintage heavy metal band, Black Sabbath, has released at least one album with an Odinist theme. Whatever one thinks of this music, it has an undeniable appeal for many young people. It is undoubtedly a better choice for them than the current barrage of rap and African-tinged pop from the mainstream music factories.

My final point is that styles of music are constantly changing. (Heraclitus' maxim, "We step and do not step into the same river twice," seems appropriate here.) To attempt to freeze and standardize any particular style is futile. The songs of the medieval troubadours gave way to Renaissance madrigals. These in turn yielded to the chamber music of the Baroque and classical periods, which in turn opened the door to the lush orchestral music of the Romantics.

One who truly loves music can see it as the varied expression of the Folk Soul on its journey through time and history. No race can boast a richer and more varied musical and cultural heritage than our own. Yes, alien control of the contemporary entertainment industry has been a stifling and destructive influence. But can the true expression of the soul of any race ever be the product of an "industry?"
Rev. Samuel Chester Jr. of Oxnard (CA) has six sons, three of whom, despite their religious upbringing, are convicted rapists. A fourth was recently convicted of robbery and assault. Deputy District Attorney Matt Hardy, who prosecuted one of the Chester rapists, says, with a straight face, there is nothing genetic about the family's criminal tendencies. The race of the Chesters was not specified—possibly deliberately—in the press reports.

Nine foreign tourists have been murdered in Florida in the last 14 months. Two were Germans. In Hallandale (FL) in early December a rock band put on a novelty act called "Dead German Tourist." A German TV crew was there to tape this egregious display of latter-day barbarism, egregious even for a barbaric sandspit like southern Florida.

At the burial service of Jerry D. Blackwell Jr., a white 29-year-old murdered by two black teenagers during a convenience store robbery in Belleville (MO), Rev. Jack Borden preached that the killers should be forgiven. "Remember what Jesus said: Love your enemies. They're sick and need help." The one who is really sick is the Reverend.

Kevin Elders, 28, son of Clinton's black Surgeon General, Jocelyn Elders, was arrested and charged with peddling an "8-ball" (one ounce) of cocaine for $275. The arrest took place only a few days after his mom suggested legalization as one solution to the drug problem. Mom's husband, Oliver, has a rental house in Little Rock (AR) that has become a hangout for drug dealers.

Christine Schweiger was shot down in a Milwaukee restaurant frequented by blacks because her killers figured that being white she would be more likely than the other customers not to have a gun. Such was the explanation of the two black teenagers who killed her. They further explained they grew angry when she told them she had no money. But there is more to the story. Schweiger, although white, was the single mother of three illegitimate mulattos. She may have put aside all thoughts of skin color when she lived and loved with blacks, but her two murderers didn't.

Allen Silverman was indicted by the Passaic County (NJ) grand jury for sexually abusing two boys and a girl, 7, 5 and 3, respectively. The abuse apparently began when the children were only six to eight months old.

Fat Face is getting much more dirty-old-mannish as tempus fugit. At his annual Christmas party, when the Senator's second wife brought up the subject of screws floating around in space during the repair of the Hubble telescope, he burped, "Floating screw...that's what people used to call me." He then tried to top that one-liner with another, "They don't call me Tyrannosaurus sex for nothing."

Whoopi Goldberg, whose claim to be Jewish would probably be disputed by Elie Wiesel, has propounded a Jewish American Princess Fried Chicken Recipe in her newly published cookbook. First step: "Send a chauffeur to your favorite butcher shop for the chicken." JAPS are then warned: "Watch your nails" when shaking the chicken in a brown paper bag. Whoopi's final advice: "Have Cook prepare rest of meal while you touch up your makeup." Abe Foxman, head of the gigantic ADL spy apparatus, damned Whoopi for her "insensitivitv." (When, if ever, will professional Nazi hunters dream up a new vilification?)

It's tough to be a schoolteacher in Brooklyn. In November, six teenage blacks, 13 to 17, drugged a 31-year-old substitute teacher into a vacant lot. After robbing her of her food stamps and cigarettes, they took turns anally, orally and vaginally violating her.

Like father, like son. Benyamin Kahane, 27-year-old son of the late, fire-breathing Rabbi Meir Kahane, is on the U.S. lecture circuit drumming up support to expel every last Palestinian from the occupied territories. In Israel, Kahane the younger was arrested for vandalizing a mosque. Not surprisingly, he is hooknose, line and sinker against the on-again, off-again Israeli-Palestinian peace shenanigans. Denying he is a Jewish racist, Kahane orates, "I am a Jew who believes in God and His Torah, which says that Jews are the chosen people."

As he was about to operate on an elderly lady in a Worcester (MA) hospital, Dr. Mohan Korgaonkar brawled with anesthesiologist Dr. Kwok Wei Chan. While a nurse carefully checked the anesthetized patient on the operating table, Dr. Chan swore at the surgeon, who responded by throwing a prep stick (whatever that is) at him and wrestling him to the floor. The operation was finally completed, after which Korgaonkar and Chan were each fined $10,000 by a state medical board.

The portrait of ex-Governor Marvin Mandel, jailed for 19 months on a political corruption charge, was recently unveiled in the Maryland State House to the applause of his old cronies. William D. Schaefcr, Maryland's present chief executive, hailed the Jewish Mandel as a "truly great governor."

Gwen Laymon, a New Orleans mother, claimed son Eric, arrested for being involved in a drive-by shooting, couldn't possibly be guilty. She said at that time he was participating in another shooting at a nearby housing project.

Mike Tyson, currently serving time for rape, boasts that in addition to learning to speak and read a little Chinese he actually got an A in a prison math test. In a reflective mood, he says he has become a "strong believer in trusting whites," who in his opinion hate high-profile blacks "as much as they hate ordinary blacks."

In Detroit a drug dealer named Paul Kinchlo was accused of shooting and killing two teenagers, then ordering some of their young friends to cut off the murdered kids' heads, hands and feet. As might be surmised, everyone who took part in this macabre butchery was black.

Nigerian Tony Chukwudi is suing Berea College (KY), which he attended for two years, for $1 billion, charging that college officials sent a witch to his District of Columbia apartment with instructions to steal his many great ideas about pollution, AIDS and animal digestion.

Zoo City gynecologist Douglas Moss is running an illegal sperm bank out of his Park Avenue office, selling Gentile sperm, which he falsely labels "glatt kosher." So reports Spy magazine (Jan. 1, 1994, p. 54).

Miguel Gaitan and Joel Ramos, both 14, were sentenced to life and 80 years, respectively, for stabbing and beating the white Michael Skelton family to death (father, mother and two young sons) in a Yakima Valley (WA) farming town. Gaitan and Ramos were schoolmates of the eldest Skelton boy. The killings may have been an initiation rite for a Mexican street gang.
66% of all black students in the U.S. and 73% of all Hispanic students attend mostly minority schools. In 1971, the year after the Supreme Court came down hard on school desegregation, the black and Hispanic percentages were 63.6% and 56.6%. New York State’s public schools are the most segregated.

96 identifiable Jews are in the 1993 Forbes roster of the 400 richest Americans. An additional 21 on the big-bucks list are possibly Jewish. Since 96 is 24% of 400, the 21 “possibles” raise the number to 117 or 29%. Jews, according to their own figures, comprise 2.3% of the population.

Shawmut, New England’s third largest bank, will pay from $10,000 to $15,000 to each black and Hispanic allegedly denied mortgages solely on the basis of race or color. The total may come to $960,000.

Goldman, Sachs & Co. made $2.3 billion in 1993. The Jewish firm’s 161 partners will receive minimum bonuses of $5 million each.

In 1992, kids under 10 years of age murdered 3 people; kids under 18 murdered 1,176.

18% of conservative Protestant males are married by age 18; 10% of mainline Protestants; 7% of Catholics.

The $3-billion annual tribute to Israel ($1.2 billion in economic grants, $1.8 billion to the military), plus a “one-time” $80 million for “movement expenses” for people in the occupied territories, was passed by the House 321 to 108; by the Senate 87 to 11. The giveaway does not include $2 billion of the $10-billion U.S. loan guarantee that came into play in fiscal 1994.

550,000 illegals inhabit Texas at an annual cost to the state of $456 million. That’s the state’s estimate, which is 57% higher in the number of illegals and 46% higher in cost than INS estimates.

The two richest Americans, Warren Buffett (investments) and Bill Gates (Microsoft), favored the Democratic Party in their recent financial contributions. Buffett gave $2,000 to the Democrats, zero to the Republicans; Gates, who recently spent a fortune on a Hollywood-style wedding on a private Hawaiian island and will shortly move his new bride into his $35-million, 42,000-sq.-ft. home, gave $4,500 to the Democrats, $500 to the Republicans. Nevertheless the media continue to inform us that the Republicans are the party of the rich.

The official immigration count for 1992 was 810,635, up 15.1% from 1991, the biggest jump in 70 years. Most come from Asia and Mexico. So reported Clinton’s new immigration commissioner, Doris Meissner, whose religion, like that of so many of the President’s appointees, is Judaism. Estimates of illegals varied widely. The new chairman of the Immigration Review Board is Barbara Jordan, the black Texan.

Some interesting I.Q. scores: Hermann Goering, 138; John F. Kennedy, 119; Richard Nixon, 143; Muhammad Ali, 78; Arthur Jensen, 156.

A survey of “historical black colleges” found only 68% of the faculty was black; 7.5% of the professors in the science departments were foreign born.

Morris Dees’ Klanwatch, which has always given the benefit of all doubts in race relations to blacks, found—perhaps to its regret—it could no longer remain silent about Negro-on-white crime. It grudgingly had to admit that in 18 racially motivated murders last year blacks were the perpetrators in 11. The actual number of black-on-white murders was many times higher, but it is nice to hear Dees finally unraveling a shred of the truth.

One-sixth of California’s 625,000 black males, 16 and older, are arrested each year.

Ivan Boesky is living high off the hawg, thanks to his divorced wife, Seema. After a bitterly acrimonious trial, she was handed a court order to give him $20 million in cash, a $2.5 million home in La Jolla and a $180,000 annual allowance. Boesky claimed his monthly bills amount to $300 for haircuts, $3,500 for food, $1,000 for clothing.

According to the Carrying Capacity Network, 2.07 million American workers were displaced in 1992 by immigrants. CCN further stated that taxpayers would save some $22 billion a year for the next 10 years if immigration was stopped after 1992.

In 1970, 37.5% of all black births were illegitimate; in 1991, 67.9%. For whites, the numbers climbed from 5.6% in 1970 to a dismaying 21.9% in 1991.

Congressional staffers now total 38,000—9 times the size of the staff of any legislative body anywhere.

More babies are born in the U.S. these days to 1 Japanese and 1 white parent than babies to 2 Jap parents.

California has 2 Jewish senators, Barbara Boxer and Dianne Feinstein. Wisconsin also has a Jewish senatorial duo, Herb Kohl and Russ Feingold. If Lana Pollack wins Michigan’s August primary and goes on to win the November election, Michigan will be the third state to have 2 Jewish senators, Carl Levin being already in place. All the above pols, of course, are Democrats.

The chance a burglary committed in the present-day U.S. will be solved is 1 in 7.

Blacks account for 50% of arrests in Miami and 67% of police dog bites.

Rep. John Conyers (D-MI) has introduced a bill in Congress demanding $250,000 for each living descendant of American slaves to compensate them for the time their ancestors spent in bondage.

In 1991, 22 abandoned or boarded babies, most of them black, filled the nation’s hospitals. “Boarded” means the babies have nowhere to go when they are ready for medical discharge.

Seagram, the octo-pene boooze empire of the Bronfman family, has coughed up $1,540,000,000 to buy 9.3% of Time Warner, an equally monstrous Jewish conglomerate. Edgar Bronfman Jr., divorced from a black actress who bore him 3 mutato children, has taken over from papa latto ch iIdren, has taken over from papa latto ch iIdren, has taken over from papa latto ch iIdren, has taken over from papa.
The world will little note, nor long remember (for it is) that the international sports scene was permanently smudged by the specter of weby-faced albino monster Tom Lantos (D-CA), a hard-nosed liberal leaning over leftwards to prevent China from hosting the 1996 Olympic Games. Atlanta got 'em. Now I would just as soon recommend a case of galloping consumption or wet leprosy, as recommend communism of any variety, be it Chinese, Russian or Israeli. But that's my point.

What country was founded by piratical pioneers whose political and economic paradigm was the Communist kibbutz? Where does this American taxpayer-subsidized monstrosity survive to the present day? In Russia, in some former Soviet satellite, in North Korea or in Castro country? It survives only in Israel, the land of Herod, where the economy is socialized from top to bottom and kosherized to the gills by Marxism. An estimated 92% of the Zionist state is controlled by the government, yet for 45 years Israel has been our "strategic asset," our so-called bulwark against creeping communism in the Middle East.

Since we're still purportedly banking on Israel to keep the Arabs from going Communist, it is proper ask why Israeli medicine is thoroughly and comprehensively "communized." Unlike Britain, where doctors may also function independently, sawbones in Israel work for the government, period. Surely this is something to keep in mind during the birth pangs of our own attempt to rescue the medical system from parasitic insurance companies and bucaneering lawyers.

But why did the sight and sound of Jewish Tom Lantos arguing against locating the next Olympics in Beijing make my lower jaw drop? What was the gravamen of the charge Lantos laid against Beijing?

Who is this Tom Lantos anyway, this crusader for democracy who played a key role in depriving the dastardly Orientals of their chance to host the Hellenized Olympics? Does he support the kibbutzim in Israel? Is he a spearhead for AIPAC? Does he sport a charming European accent—replete with all the trills and gutturals—that mark him immediately as another survivor of the Holocaust, an accent that would make any tattoo on his forearm redundant? Did Tom Lantos ever admit that the Jews murdered 34 Americans on the U.S.S. Liberty? Don't hold your breath. Did he condemn Israel for its "ethnic cleansing" of Palestine in 1948 and 1967? Has he ever denounced the house demolitions, illegal forced evictions and racist Nuremberg-type laws which govern the relationships between the alien "others" and the occupying Jews? I haven't even mentioned the daily brutal beatings, all the broken bones and the 1500—many of them children—who died in the Intifada. Who is Tom Lantos, that all our media swains commend so swooningly? You should remember him well, if you remember George Bush's crusade to bring democracy to Kuwait in Desert Sturm und Dreck.

As a member of the House Intelligence Committee, Lantos took testimony from a tearful teenager who swore that brutal Iraqi soldiers were dumping Kuwaiti babies out of their incubators and spiriting the plundered equipment back to Iraq, presumably for the benefit of the bad-seed babies of sad-sack sadist Saddam. Secretary of State James Baker said we had to crush Saddam, but omitted to say the secondary purpose was to make the world safe for Jews. No mention of the Bush family's interest in two oil companies and the golden links those companies had to Kuwait. Such talk might have made the American electorate too cynical, having already been calloused by the creeping fungus of Watergate, Iranagate and the S&L debacle.

The naive American might not support a war in Arabia Deserta for the sake of democracy or George Bush's oil leases, but half-baked babies being dumped out of hospital incubators by immoral Muslims raised Joe Sixpack's blood pressure to 300/220.

The trouble was that all the turmoil and banditry related to the incubators was untrue, which makes the sour cream of the jest even more savory. Lantos, of course, knew it was a lie all along. And the cherry pit of the whole imposture, the fake jewel pasted into the belly dancer's navel to make her undulations more seductive, was the Lantos-processed teenager who testified so tearfully. As the media finally informed us long after her performance, she was none other than the daughter of the Kuwaiti ambassador. Tom Lantos knew all about the ploy, but he kept his fellow members of the House Intelligence Committee in the dark, not to mention the people of America, who would have to fight, pay and die once again for Israel, oil and a New World Disorder.

Was Lantos afraid of making his fellow politicians even more cynical? Was he protecting their impenetrable innocence and the virginal mind-set of the Kuwaiti ambassador's daughter, making sure that she was not penetrated by the truth, even if she had never seen one Kuwaiti baby dragged out of one incubator? Was Tom Lantos ensuring that she would preserve her purity intact, so that she could return to her Parisan parties unavished, secure in the knowledge that she had done her tidbit to bring feminism and democracy to Kuwait?

So now that we know about the purity of her motives, what about Tom's? Is it possible that he was putting Israel ahead of America? Is it possible that he preferred to see Americans bundled into body bags, rather than Israelis? Is it possible that he wanted to preserve the vapid ignorance of the American electorate? This is the man who didn't want the Olympic Games to go to China, because the Communist mandarins were guilty of "human rights violations."

While on the subject of the Olympics, how about an event called "manipulating the stock market"? Imagine what Dennis Levine, Michael Milken and Ivan Boesky could do with that! Any doubt that Israel would bring back the Gold Medal in high-jumping junk bonds? Who's better at broad jumping the numerous resolutions passed against it at the U.N.? Who's better at bench pressing, lifting with a little finger the heavyweights of the U.S. Congress? Who's better at house demolitions, forced evictions and enforcing the laws of racial purity? Who's had more practice skew shooting human targets during the Intifida? Imagine the possibilities, if only stealing land and water were duly legalized as Olympic events? Who would corner the market in Gold medals, if tear-gassing maternity wards, breaking arms and legs, and murdering with "rubber" bullets in the occupied territories were contests approved by the very same Olympic committee which denied the games to China because of its "violations of human rights."

Whatever else we know or do not know about Tom Lantos—self-righteous Jew, Holocaust survivor, Machiavellian congressman—of this we can be certain. He has few rivals in the race to bolster the cause of Zionism.

Notes from the Sceptred Isle—John Nobull

At the beginning of his gospel, St. Matthew provides an extensive genealogy of Christ, 21 generations in all, from Abraham to David, from David to the Babylonian Exile and from the Babylonian Exile down to Jesus. The problem is that the penultimate link in the chain is Joseph, not Mary. When Joseph was upset to find his wife with child, an angel appeared and told him that the Holy Ghost had inseminated her. This allayed his fears, but it doesn’t allay my doubts. If Christ’s father was the Holy Ghost, then Joseph’s descent from David was wholly irrelevant. I find it quite extraordinary that so many Christian ministers, of all sects, have omitted to mention this small but significant discrepancy. As James Joyce puts it in Ulysses:

I’m the quarest young feller
That ever you heard,
Me mother’s a Jew,
Me father’s a bird...

But was the Holy Ghost Jewish, too? In the Talmud, Mary is described as a prostitute who was impregnated by Panthera, a Roman soldier. This squares to some extent with my gut feeling that Jesus just couldn’t be a Jew. He had the wrong personality. Jesus, who came from Galilee of the Gentiles, may well have had Gentile as well as Jewish genes. That would explain his capacity to see things not only as a Jew but also as a non-Jew. Hence the parable of the Good Samaritan. Hence also the parable of the Talents, which is very Jewish indeed, and inspired the Puritans to lay up wealth in this world as well as the next. If Christ had been wholly Gentile by origin, would he have cared enough to drive the moneylenders out of the temple (with a whip, yet)? Since he described the priesthood of the Jews as “a generation of vipers,” I find it hard to believe that he meant it as a compliment.

When it comes to the crucifixion, all four gospels make it very clear that the Pharisees and Sadducees saw Christ as a rival. The fork-tongued questions they asked him were designed to drive the moneylenders out of the temple (with a whip, yet)? Since he described the priesthood of the Jews as “a generation of vipers,” I find it hard to believe that he meant it as a compliment.

Nowadays it is the Romans who are blamed for the crucifixion. After all, they did stage it. But anyone reading any of the four gospel versions would get a clear impression that the Jewish priesthood framed Jesus from the word go.

The Oberammergau passion play, which I saw many years ago, before it was emasculated, gives a much truer picture of the gospel story than any modern cleric. In fact, most ministers and preachers have long ago ceased to read out key passages from the New Testament in church. The words are dynamite, and they know it. The question now is whether Christianity can be tolerated any longer if it presents such an unflattering picture of the People of the Book? In any case, what is the point of a religion, the ministers of which do not dare to quote their own gospels, or to object when the Jews vilify their founder?

I Agree with N.B.F.

I am happy enough with N.B. Forrest’s statement that Christianity is historically the religion of Europe, whatever multiplicity of beliefs may have antedated it. However, from the viewpoint of mythology, Christianity is manifestly inferior to Greek paganism. Only later in the 20th century did Western poets cease to use Grecian imagery. All those stories of saints cannot compete with the tales of Greek gods, which the poets found more aesthetically satisfying. What is more, Christian beliefs were continuously intertwined with pagan ones. Chartres was built by men who believed God might be approached through beauty. That is an essentially Greek belief, whereas the Protestants who smashed the beautiful glass windows of our English churches were moralistically inspired. Milton wrote magically about: “Storied windows richly dight, Casting a dim religious light,” while his pals were out smashing those very windows, like a crowd of modern football hooligans.

The rejection by modern Christians of beautiful churches indicates that Christianity has gone back to the culture of Hebrew moralism with which it began. Modern Church of England parsons destroy the old oaken pews and pulpits to create a suitable setting for pop music sessions. Roman Catholic priests are more interested in bingo and paedophilia than the mediaeval tradition. As for the Nonconformists, they are just surrogate Jews, hating beauty and wedded to moralism.

I think it’s time to ditch organised Christianity, which is almost entirely dedicated to race-mixing. Our beliefs should accord with the findings of science, but our cultural life should be inspired by the mythology of the pagan past. As for our morality, it should be based on the mores of the tribe, on our own experience, not on rules laid down by Hebrew prophets, Christian theologians or liberal judges.
Canada. The government's Commissioner of Official Languages is a Dr. Goldblum, whose office employs 173 paper pushers, 60% of them Franco-phones, although the latter comprise a mere 22% of the Canadian population.

Canada was slightly less of a totalitarian state on December 20. On that day the New Brunswick Court of Appeal gave Malcolm Ross a well-deserved Christmas present by ordering the Magnetic Hill School, which had suspended him from teaching, to put him back in the classroom. Ross had the courage to write about Jews in a manner that left Jewish censors chomping at the bit. The Court ruled that Ross, since he had never sounded off on these hot-button topics to his students, was well within his rights to write that the Holocaust was exaggerated and that Jews had conspired to undermine Christianity.

New Brunswick Jews had mobilized to have Ross fired, charging that anyone whose head was full of such ideas would not be able to resist sharing them with his students.

Despite the Appeal Court's ruling, the Canadian Jewish Congress, as is the habit of Jews everywhere, plans to get the Human Rights Commission to appeal to Canada's Supreme Court, knowing that even if Ross wins again, the cost of litigation will cause him all kinds of financial problems and that the usual pro-Jewish media coverage will continue to embarrass him. Justice in Canada, as in the U.S., favors those who can best afford the overpaid legal beagles.

The Canadian Jewish Congress is also worried about a white power band, RaHoWa, an acronym for Racial Holy War, which bangs out such lyrics as:

*Strike force, kill our rivals
Strike force into the Jewish lair.*

RaHoWa's other claim to fame is a parody of Nancy Sinatra's These Boots Are Made for Walking, which goes like this: "One of these days these boots are gonna walk all over Jews."

Their brains work in a predictably hateful way. Those who talk most about hate crimes are often the biggest haters. Psychotherapist Monna Zentner, 55, most definitely not a WASP, crashed a majority rally in Southwest Ontario where she informed those in attendance that John Masters, the horny old sexologist of the Masters and Johnson duo, had completed a study that proved bigotry made males prematurely impotent—lose their steam, as it were. That no such study existed is of little consequence to minority hate-mongers. Zentner, incidentally, has twice been burned out of house and office in the last nine months.

Two Canadians, both with long criminal records, were arrested in Toronto last July and charged with attempting to break into an apartment. One of them, Barry McLaughlin, 38 and white, was sent to jail where he remained for five months. The other breaker and enterer was John Manitowabie, 26, who only spent six days in custody. Why the different penalties? Manitowabie is an Indian and the Canadian government has a special "aboriginal diversity program" for Redskin crooks, who are delivered to the tender, genuinely tender, mercies of an Indian council, which is allowed to punish convicted Indian criminals as it deems fit. The sentences are secret, so it's impossible to find out if the criminals are ever punished or, if punished, are ever subjected to anything more than counselling, community service or a stint of "self-examination."

At the wee hour of 2:00 a.m., when everybody had qualified a little too much at a Peterborough bar, Curtis Peters, an auto mechanic, shouted the F/N epithet at a black dude who was acting in a most menacing manner. Sixty days in the jug for Peters. Not a day behind bars for the aggressive black.

Oueibigue Tagui, 34, a black who entered Canada on a student visa in 1992, tried to hang himself after confessing he had killed a white woman, Manon Paquin, by pushing her in front of an oncoming subway train in Montreal. He wasn't mad at her; just terribly rate at another woman, a bureaucrat who had refused him a government loan. To appease his hatred for the white loan official, he murdered the first white woman he chanced to encounter.

The 1991 Canadian Census contains no reference to race. Officials thought questions on this subject would be irksome to minorities. The Census takers also feared that racial statistics might strengthen the growing but unheeded demand of the Canadian majority to dam the influx of "visible minorities."

A private survey indicated that 74% of Canadians believe minorities should try harder to fit into the Canadian social order, instead of supporting government efforts to de-Canadianize majorityites so they would fit more snugly into the minority scheme of things. The survey also indicated that 54% of Canadians believe the country allows in "too many people of different races and cultures."

Britain. Derek Prag, a British member of the European Parliament, introduced a resolution calling for the release of Jewish spymaster Jonathan Pollard. The motion was passed by a large majority. Pollard is an American Jew who plans to retire to Israel when and if he gets out of his American jail. It is a puzzlement to most everyone but Instauration subscribers why the European Parliament should wish to get mixed up in a matter that only concerns Americans and Jews and has absolutely nothing to do with Europe. American politicians do their kowtowing to Jews and sell their country short in return for Jewish money to finance their election campaigns. Are European pols beginning to adopt the same trick?

A Scottish scientist, Richard Sharpe, predicts that unless some countermeasures are soon put in place it's all over for the human race. The contamination of the environment by chemicals, Sharpe is convinced, is dramatically reducing the sperm count in men by having the same negative effect on male potency as would overdoses of female sex hormones. To prove his point the Scot referred to the sharp increase in testicular cancer and in the ever larger number of baby boys born with deformed sex organs. Sharpe's predictions are already showing up in turtles, alligators and various species of fish, which suddenly change sex for no apparent reason.

The wife is black, the husband a mulatto. The couple is unable to have children. The wife wants to be implanted with a white woman's egg fertilized by the mulatto husband's sperm. A fertility clinic is all set to go ahead with this "designer baby" experiment, which is somewhat similar to a previous in vitro fertilization in Italy, when an infertile black woman gave birth to a white baby. She explained she wanted to bring a child into the world that would not go through the discrimination mill. Another fertility "miracle" took place in Britain shortly after Christmas. A 59-year-old woman gave birth to a set of designer twins, with whom she has not the slightest genetic link.
From an Irish subscriber. Last year Birmingham, Britain's second biggest city, banned all Christmas symbols like Santa Claus, Merry Christmas messages, church bells, angels and Nativity scenes from street decorations. This in the country of Dickens and chestnuts! As for myself, I celebrate Christmas as a Western cultural holiday. Christian traditions were an integral part of my childhood. Anglo residents in the Third World would no longer dream of imposing multiculturalism on those societies. Can you imagine a member of the Christian community in contemporary Calcutta complaining about the city's religious customs? I'll tell you one thing. You won't see this culture war in Dublin. My husband may be right. We may be savages, but the Irish have kept more of their insular spunk than the British, who are all played out.

From a British subscriber. The Church of England, disintegrating over the issue of female priests, is trying to be more "with it" by launching a campaign for the employment of more "ethnics," and by making the Bible more relevant to social issues. The clerics have an abundance of source material since the Holy Book's contents range from recommending the genocide of "heathens" (Old Testament) to far-out socialism and egalitarianism (New Testament).

Generally accepted Biblical interpretations have a whole array of different meanings. Ex-Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, daughter of a Methodist local preacher, whose social life revolved around the Methodist Church until she was 18, once iterated that if the Good Samaritan had no money he could have done little for the man who fell among thieves. From a practical viewpoint, theparable teaches us, "Make money first, so you can do good afterwards."

"No room at the inn" is often interpreted to mean we should help the poor and refugees. Enoch Powell, a practicing Episcopalian, has commented that Joseph was a prosperous tradesman with a home and a large family who "drop­ed out," much as modern hippies do.

When it comes down to it, Jesus and his disciples were a typical band of religious mendicants who lived by begging for food, money and a roof over their heads, all to be provided by others. When Jesus told the rich young man to sell all he had and give it to the poor, he was in effect saying, "Gimme."

France. Credit Lyonnais is France's largest bank. It's new boss, Jean Peyrel­vade, is trying to refloat this financially beached whale following a $1-billion loss at the hands of Jean-Yves Haberer, a chosen moneymonger whose investments in such turkeys as MGM, Robert Maxwell, and Olympic and York came a cropper.

President François Mitterrand copped out of laying a remembrance wreath at the tomb of Marshall Pétain, France's WWI military hero, following lashing criticism by French Jews over Pétain's cooperation with the Nazis.

Germany. A new documentary film prepared to expose the dangers posed by articulate young rightists, Profession: Neo-Nazi, is having the unintended effect of injecting heretical ideas into the minds of German youth. Underwritten by an arts grant from four German states, it features a photogenic 27-year-old "neo-Nazi" activist, Ewald Althans. The camera crew follows him as he goes about his various nefarious activities: working at his Munich "Brown House" headquarters; organizing a "national socialist tour" of Germany for visitors from Spain and France; and discussing radical right politics with his dignified parents.

Critics were alarmed that the film's director did not interpose contradictions to some of Althans' "shocking" statements, particularly in the episode where he in­forms Auschwitz visitors that no Jews were gassed there and that far from being murdered, "They all survived to take money from the Germans." A reporter of Der Spiegel (an improved imitation of Time) went into a liberaloid tizzy. He feared the film "might convince people that the Holocaust never took place."

The Federal Criminal Office attributes 30% of the crime in Germany to foreigners: Yugoslavs specialize in burglary; Poles concentrate on auto theft; Romanians stick to petty thievery; Turks run the heroin trade; Russians, mostly Jews, are into extortion, protection rackets and money laundering; violent Vietnam gangs fight for control of the black market in cigarettes.

He was locked up for nearly four weeks in a dark, dank German jail cell and allowed only a couple of visitors. Although he had a serious stomach ulcer, he was fed fat-ridden sausages, sauerkraut and thick, almost indigestible rye bread. He lost 20 lbs. Vicious criminals would pound on his cell door and threaten to "kill the Nazi," who didn't speak a word of German. Who was this dangerous criminal who might have been treated better if he had been a serial murderer? He was Fred Leuchter, the American who knows more about gas chambers than almost anyone in the New World, having designed one for the Missouri State Penitentiary. His crime? In 1991 in a short visit to Germany he uttered some remarks about the nonexistence of Auschwitz gas chambers. Leuchter was finally freed after a huge mail and fax campaign organized by Ernst Zündel. His passport was returned on November 30 and, after posting bond of $15,000, was on his way back to Boston from "democratic Germany."

Austria. This country is just as bad as other Western European nations in the realm of free speech. Several Austrians are now serving time for merely questioning some phase of the Holocaust. A furious few are resorting to the only means they have to protest their enforced silence. Letter bombs have been going off in Vienna and other Austrian cities like firecrackers. Mayor Helmut Zilk of Vienna lost three fingers when a package he was opening exploded in his hands. An 18-year-old legal secretary was hospitalized after several bomb fragments tore into her body. A journalist and a Catholic priest were also injured when they opened booby-trapped packages. All the above were involved in projects, "supporting the rights of immigrants, refugees and minority groups," in the words of the N.Y. Times. The violence may possibly have been touched off by the revelation that 430,000 foreigners now inhabit Vienna, equivalent to 26% of the city's population. More than 100,000 of these intruders entered Austria illegally.

Russia. Lenin, the founding father of the Soviet Empire, was one-quarter Jewish. Will the founding father of a new Slavic Empire, an even bigger imperium because it will include all the old Russian-occupied territories of Finland, Alaska and Eastern Europe, be a half-Jew? Will he be the one to fulfill the old Russian dream of a push to the south all the way to Istanbul, formerly Constantinople, originally Byzantium?

Perish the thought! Vladimir Volkovitch Zhirinovsky is as phony as a one-ruble note. He may have said a few truths about Jews. After all, he is a racial insider. Nevertheless, it is Instauration’s best guess that if he ever makes it to the Kremlin he will do more to destroy Russia than Lenin and his largely Jewish gang were ever able to do.

Westerners fed up with Western-style democracy and its endemic humbuggery were delighted to hear some anti-liberal talk even if it had to come from a Jewish opportunist. But before anyone gets too excited it should be remembered that only a few short years ago, the son of Wolf briefly headed a Jewish, pro-Israeli organization called Shalom.

Someone has to come along and save Russia. It could be a man on horseback, some general or another. But Russians tend to cotton to mystics, to weird religious figures like Rasputilin. Whoever eventually takes over in Moscow, it won’t be Zhirinovsky, unless the world is ready for a nuclear war. Instauration’s vote goes to Solzhenitsyn, but he is a good, highly intelligent, honest man—the kind of person who doesn’t become a political leader these days, either in an autocracy or democracy.

While Zhirinovsky is shooting off his mouth, another Jew is also hard at work destroying Russia, a 100% Chosenite who goes by the name of Jeffrey Sachs, a Harvard economist. Sachs is supposed to be the brains behind Yeltsin’s privatization. It was Sachs who proposed the senseless and muddled “shock therapy” that was supposed to jolt the Russian economy into high gear. Instead, it has produced nothing but economic chaos.

When Alexander Solzhenitsyn was interviewed on a popular French television program, he commented that the arrival of capitalism in Russia has led “to savage and repulsive behavior” which have given birth to “a bureaucracy worse than that of the Communists.”

Israel. The universally touted Palestine-Israel peace accord is still hanging fire. The sticking point seems to be the stationing of Zionist troops around Jericho, reputedly the world’s oldest city, which the “obliging” Israelis have promised to give back to the Palestinians and which is scheduled to be Yasser Arafat’s HQ. Joshua destroyed Jericho, says the Bible, and more reliable histories say that Mark Anthony gave it as a present to Cleopatra. The town has only 15,000 inhabitants, but grows some tasty oranges and grapefruit. Peace or no peace, Jericho sits on a strategic Middle Eastern crossroad overrun by various armies for the last 4,000 or 5,000 years. If peace does come to Jericho as a result of the recent agreements between the warring parties, it will be partially financed by the U.S. And if Syria’s President Assad actually joins the peace process, we may be sure someone is paying him off. Guess who?

Circumcision is a barbaric Middle Eastern and Jewish rite inherited from the darkest and oldest moments of religious tribalism. It’s hard to believe, but fully 60% of newborn male babies in the U.S. are subjected to this bloody and disgusting rite, which is only matched by the female circumcision practiced by some African tribes.

Cutting off the foreskin of screaming babies is bad enough. Performing the same operation on the dead is religious insanity pushed to the outer limits. This is precisely what is happening in Israel to the corpses of Russian Jews who arrived in the so-called Holy Land with their foreskins intact. A department of the Israeli government has issued instructions that newcomers who die uncircumcised will be circumcised after death. According to former Chief Rabbi Mondechei Eliahu, uncircumcised Jews “will not enter the Garden of Eden.”

Australia. This nation seems to be leading the West in choking off the witch-hunts against Eastern Europeans co-opted into working for Nazis in WWII. To the great dismay of Jews, the Aussie government announced it would stop all such prosecutions, having failed to get convictions in four separate cases.

As Spotlight reported, in the midst of one “war crimes” trial an alleged survivor, P. Melnik, one of the many flown in from abroad and put up in the best hotels, courtesy of the Australian treasury, while on the witness stand pointed to a man in the courtroom he indicated had been a perpetrator of a Holocaust in the Ukraine. In a trembling voice Melnik said he’d “never forget” the face, which was permanently engraved in his memory. When the judge asked the person who owned the face to identify himself, he turned out to be an American lawyer who had been invited by an Australian friend to attend one trial session.

China. The Chinese government, the only one in the world sensible enough to openly advocate eugenics, wants to raise the genetic quality of its population while simultaneously reducing its size. To accomplish this worthy goal, a draft law has been submitted to the National Peoples Congress proposing the sterilization of the country’s millions of mental retards, particularly the parents of the 300,000 to 450,000 “congenitally disabled” infants born every year. In regard to reducing the size of China’s 1.2 billion population, Beijing has already decreased the nation’s birthrate, owing to the widely publicized one-child-per-family campaign launched back in 1970. The current rate of 1.8 births per woman is well below the replacement level of 2.2.

The government is thinking seriously about forcibly preventing Chinese with hepatitis and venereal disease from having babies. Pregnant women with these infections may have to undergo abortions. Engaged couples so infected may be sterilized or be banned from marriage until cured.

China has 22% of the world’s population and 7% of the world’s arable land. The draft law entitled “On Eugenics and Health Protection” is characterized as Nazism by Western bleeding hearts, who keep pounding the theme that such stringent measures are undemocratic. Exactly. Which is why democracy, when faced with these crucial demographic problems, fails the test.

Since Clinton is now promising to cancel favorable trade agreements with China unless it cleans up its “human rights” program, the cost to the Chinese of maintaining the commerce would be the addition of millions of physically and mentally diseased persons to the population. Of all Clinton’s acts, his attempt to interfere in China’s domestic population policy would be the most banal—and the most dysgenic.
Frozen "Ark"

A project being undertaken by the Center for Reproduction of Endangered Species at the San Diego Zoo is aimed at saving most of the world's endangered species. In the appropriately named "frozen zoo" biologists are preserving semen samples and ova from more than 300 animals of 150 species currently headed for extinction. The precious genetic material is held in a metal tank chilled by liquid nitrogen to -320°F.

Although the ability to raise a species from the dead is years away, scientists foresee the day when a fertilized egg from the frozen ark can be successfully implanted in a surrogate mother. Computer-designed matings will help limit inbreeding and improve genetic pairings.

The project was launched 19 years ago by Kurt Benirschke, who recruited a team of immunologists, endocrinologists, geneticists, biologists, animal behaviorists and infectious disease experts to tackle the challenge. If the process works for koalas and lemurs, the principles could also be applied to saving moribund races of humans.

California on the March

Everything good, bad and horrible happens first in California. We all know about the bad and horrible: Hollywood, the San Fran pervers, earthquakes, the L.A. riots, the flood of illegals, the two Jewesses who somehow got to be senators. Not many of us, however, know about the good.

Governor Pete Wilson has finally gotten off his duff and advocates stopping all welfare for the euphemistically dubbed "undocumented workers." He is also urging that U.S. citizenship be denied to children of illegal brood mares.

Even more upbeat, the California Civil Rights Initiative may get on the state ballot in November 1994. This calls for an end to preferential treatment to anyone because of "race, ethnicity, national origin, sex or religion." "Anyone" includes every type of queer.

Still more to the point is the movement to carve the most populous state into three states. If the plan should succeed, an independent Southern California would stow its Hispanics, Jewish and black juices. The tripartite idea gained some momentum when the State Assembly passed legislation to put a statewide, nonbinding resolution on the matter in the November ballot.

Gutsy Reverend

Returning from a trip to Israel, Rev. Joe Hale, not just any run-of-the-mill preacher, but a prominent member of the World Methodist Council, wants the U.S. to cancel the huge amount of foreign aid that winds its way every year to Israel. Hale mailed a letter to President Clinton that stated in part: "We do not owe Israel $3 billion annually to take land they do not own, to build settlements that are an impediment to peace, and to destroy the lives of people by stripping them of their basic right as human beings. The West Bank Palestinians, he admonished, are forced by Israel "to exist in miserable, subhuman conditions. . . ." Adhering to the traditional rabbinical practice of answering facts with deprecations, Stephen Fuchs, a Nashville rabbi, ticked off the Methodist official's charges as "preposterous and unfortunate."

Turnabout Is Fair Play

The bigoted administrators of the University of California at Riverside shut down a fraternity that was distributing a T-shirt that flaunted a not very original line from a song by the late Bob Marley: "It doesn't matter where you came from, as long as you know where you're going." The shutdown was ordered in response to a few complaints of "racism" from Mexican students, some of them probably illegals. Normally this is the end of such a story. The white college administrators bow low, gush forth a chorus of mea culpas and do everything short of suicide to appease the minority racists. To the astonishment of all concerned, the T-shirt saga ended abnormally, that is it had a happy ending.

John Howard, president of the Individual Rights Foundation, raised such a ruckus he not only forced the university Torquemadas to reinstate the fraternity, but also to enroll in a "First Amendment" training course to teach them to stop muzzling speech at the beck and call of minorities. Previously college seminars of this type were intended to instruct students to limit free expression instead of encouraging it.

Martyred Cop's Book Is Published

No police officer has ever been treated more shabbily than Sergeant Stacey Koon, the L.A. cop who was freed by a white jury at his first trial, then sentenced to 30 months by a mixed-race jury at his second, double jeopardy trial. In his recently published book, Presumed Guilty, the Tragedy of the Rodney King Affair, Koon goes into the fine details of what can only be described as his martyrdom. If you can't find the book at your local bookstore—chances are you won't—you can order it from the Stacey Koon Defense Fund, 107 East Broadway, Glendale, CA 91205. With the family breadwinner in the slammer, wife Mary and the five children are not having an easy time of it. A check for $30 (or more) will not only bring you the book, but boost the monetary resources of the family's dwindling bank account. The Koons need every cent they can muster because Janet Reno's goons are now appealing Koon's sentence. They want to lengthen it.

Not Everyone Has Surrendered

- Censorship is so heavy-handed these days that even libraries are getting into the act. David Wayfield of Martha's Vineyard was banned from entering the Vineyard Haven Library, falsely accused of stealing a menorah and actually assaulted by library officials, primarily because of his dim view of Zionist machinations here and abroad. Wayfield summarized all his grievances and filed a civil rights complaint against the town of Tisbury, which a local court promptly dismissed. Wayfield then took the matter to the U.S. Court of Appeals. What do you know? The justices came down on his side, ruling that the district court should review its cavalier treatment of his complaint.

- Joseph Kover, a town councilman in Newport (NY), resorted to the words, "Nigger from Harlem," to describe New York State Comptroller Carl McCall at an October town council meeting. The outcry from the media and the minorities was routine. What was not routine was Kover's reaction. Instead bowing and scraping and sinking to his knees, he remained straight and tall. Not only did he refuse to resign, he repeated the taboo phrase.

- Stephen Meltzer, a white fired from his job as vice-president of black Motown Record Co., launched a lawsuit against the company, asserting that a Negro executive had informed him that he (Meltzer) was fired because he was "not black enough for Motown."

- If federal police or laws are responsible for the tsunamis of illegal immigrants that have washed against the beaches of Florida, then it would only seem appropriate that the federal government, not the Sunshine State, should pay the piper. Since Florida has become a veritable black hole of gravitational pull for Haitians, Cubans and Central Americans, Governor Lawton Chiles is suing the federal government for the social costs of illegal immigration.
